GERMANY STANDS FIRM ON EQUALITY ISSUE

Baron von Neurath, whose olive branch is awaited with the keenest interest.

HITLER OFFERS FRIENDSHIP ON AN EQUAL BASIS BRITISH LEADERS' GESTURE

BERLIN, NOV. 10. GERMANY'S SECURITY IS ENDANGERED NOT LESS THAN OTHERS. WHY DON'T THE OTHERS TRUST US? WHEN HAS THE GERMAN NATION BROKEN ITS PLEDGED WORD? WE ARE READY TO GO INTO EVERY INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE AND PARTICIPATE IN EVERY NEGOTIATION AND SIGN TREATIES, BUT ONLY AS EQUALS, DECLARED HERR HITLER IN A BROADCAST ADDRESS TO-DAY.

The Nazi Chancellor reiterated Germany's desire to stretch out their hand to their former enemies, but "I won't have Germany treated as a second class nation."

"Either you will give us equality or you will never see us again," he concluded.—Reuter.

PREMIER RECEIVES DEPUTATION

The Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary this morning received a deputation led by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and including persons representative of the churches, literature, science, industry, education and peace movements.

There was a whole group of questions of the same character.

WILLING TO LEAD.

Again, while the British Government was perfectly willing to lead, it must be remembered that nothing effective could be done without international agreement.

The question was not whether disarmament was desirable, but how the maximum of disarmament was to be secured, and there was the further question of how that maximum of to-day being secured, becomes by the operation of mind and nature the minimum of to-morrow.

He recalled that in the London Navy Treaty, America, Japan and Britain reached an agreement but France and Italy could not see their way to join. They, therefore, had to put in what is known as an escalator clause which gave any one of the three signatories the power to inform the other two that they had to expand their programmes because some non-signatory had engaged in building which really threatened their security.

IS MONTHS' LATE?

"If the British Government were moved simply by Service ideas, militaristic ideas, and ideas which depended upon the assumption that an increase in arms is an increase in security, the escalator clause would have been put into operation eighteen months ago."

It has not been put into operation and it will be the last thing we shall agree to do, but in the 1935 conference provided for by the London Treaty we shall certainly be up against very considerable difficulties. I only recite these things to show you the nature of our problem."

PROBATION.

Proceeding, he referred to supervision and the so-called probationary period. He said the word "probationary" had never been used by the British Government and when used by others they have always said that they did not agree to it.

He did not understand why any body ever assumed that Britain did not mean to begin control or supervision from the very beginning or how the impression got abroad that Germany alone was to be supervised.

That never was the intention. There were very considerable difficulties in the way of supervision. At least two Powers, for various reasons, did not favour the proposal at first. Not that they had anything to hide, or intended to act outside any agreement. Those two Powers were the United States and Britain.

"When eventually it was agreed that we should go in for super-

AFGHANISTAN QUIET

Story of Murder Still Lacking

London, Nov. 10. Latest telegrams received in London indicate that the situation in Afghanistan and on the North-West Frontier of India is quiet. Full details of the assassination of Nadir Shah are still awaited.—British Wireless.

JAPAN AND GERMANY

FRENCH DEPUTY SEES LIKENESS

SHARP PASSAGE IN DEBATE

Paris, Nov. 10. A sharp passage occurred in the French Chamber between M. Marin and M. Longuet, during the debate on foreign affairs, which has been going on for two days.

M. Marin was advocating closer French relations with Japan.

France, he said, must cultivate friendships, particularly of Japan and the United States.

M. Longuet, the Socialist leader, jumped in to interrupt: "Japan has Germany's mentality!"

M. Marin, who is a leader of the Right Wing group, retorted: "I consider Japan to be a defender of order."

The debate was adjourned until November 14 to permit the deputies to visit their constituencies on Armistice Day.—Reuter.

MISSING PROFESSOR MYSTERY

No Information of Whereabouts

Mr. W. J. B. Fletcher, formerly of the British Consular Service, who is now a Professor of English at Canton University, is still missing.

Mr. Fletcher left his home at No. 12, Bonham Road at 10.30 yesterday morning, since when his continued absence has caused much alarm and a report to be made to the Police by Mr. B. P. C. Fletcher, his son.

Police Headquarters this morning state they are still without information as to the whereabouts of the missing gentleman, whose description has already been circulated amongst the various Stations.

Dr. Faury, Consul for Egypt in Kobe, was a through passenger by the s.s. Hakozaki Maru.

ARMISTICE DAY

DEAN SWANN'S PLEA FOR NEW OUTLOOK

SPIRIT OF HOPE

A change of attitude to Armistice Day and a change of name to suggest Hope was urged by Dean Swann in an eloquent sermon preached before a distinguished gathering at the Cathedral this morning.

"I believe," said the Dean, "that quite definitely the time has come for discarding completely the name 'Armistice Day.' It has associations which I feel sure must be replaced by others. Beginning as a day of gratitude for the cessation of hostilities in the great war it was natural that its name should emphasize this aspect. Later it was seen that public opinion wanted to use it as a day of remembrance of those who had fallen in the war. So it is now very generally called 'Remembrance Day.'"

REMEMBRANCE OF WHAT?

But as the years have passed it has seemed increasingly clear to many that if it is to live on there must be another change of attitude towards it. Such a change is forced upon us not only by the mere passage of time but far more by the present situation in international relationships. It is quite possible that we may have to change the name again.

"Remembrance Day" is much better for our present purpose than "Armistice Day," but it is a question whether the unqualified word "remembrance" is not too capable of conflicting interpretation to make it desirable for the future. One can "remember" in so many different ways. One may "remember" with sorrow or with thankfulness and pride, but one may also remember with bitterness and unrelenting suspicion and hatred.

NEGATIVE EMOTIONS.

The war generation will always continue to remember with sorrow and pride their brothers and fathers, friends and relatives, who gave their lives—an appalling multitude; but there is now a generation of younger folk for whom this obviously is impossible. The Great War means less to them than the Boer war to the middle aged. How can we expect the young men and women in their twenties, on whom incidentally the future of the world depends, to enter with any degree of reality into the observance of a day for "remembering" what they do not remember?

Again, must those others for whom the war was a vivid and painful reality continue to look back to it with nothing more than a negative emotion of sorrow, or even with a passive pride and thankfulness? And now that the years have shown us the supreme folly of the whole business, are not pride and thankfulness concerning the sacrifice of ten million lives quite inadequate sentiments.

MASSACRE STORY RIDICULED

Moscow Warmly Denies Allegation

Moscow, Nov. 10. The reports that two hundred Manchurian citizens were murdered by Soviet soldiers at Patrovskoe for non-payment of grain tax is ridiculed here. The reports are described as "slandorous" statements.

The first "information" of the alleged massacre came from the Harbin correspondent of Nippon Denpo.—Reuter.

REBELLION OVER

HAVANA BACK TO NORMAL

THOUSAND MADE PRISONERS

Havana, Nov. 10. Rebels to the number of nearly a thousand to-day surrendered to forces loyal to President Grau San Martin, who thus has survived another attempt to oust the revolutionary regime from office.

All the rebels were made prisoners and taken to various fortresses for detention pending trial by court-martial.

Havana, after the bloodshed and terror of the last two or three days, is returning to normal with almost astonishing rapidity.

It was difficult to believe that the President has been engaged in a grim struggle against his adversaries for several days, in which the casualty toll has included over a hundred killed.

The future is still uncertain, however, though there seems little doubt that the Army and the Navy are still loyal to the Grau regime.—Reuter.

WARSHIP FOR HAVANA

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 10. The battleship Wyoming, which was here in connexion with the Armistice celebrations, has been ordered to Havana, where the death roll in the battle between rebels and Government forces has reached 40.—Reuter.

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS

KING AND QUEEN VISIT PRINCESS ROYAL

London, Nov. 10. The Princess Royal, who underwent an operation for appendicitis on Tuesday is going on well. Her Royal Highness was visited this morning by the King and Queen.—British Wireless.

U.S. DOLLAR SLIDE CHECKED

PRESIDENT TAKES ACTION

GOLD PRICE REDUCED

New York, Nov. 10. The downward slide of the American dollar was checked to-day, and it is significant that the brake was applied by official action.

There was only one method open to the Administration, the fixing of the price offered for domestic gold at a lower level than the world quotation, and this course was adopted.

The move succeeded in breaking the slide and in confining fluctuations within very narrow limits. Opening at the post-war high-water mark of $35.16 to the pound sterling, the dollar gradually strengthened and steadied around $35.12.

SECURITY SLUMP.

The slump in United States Government securities, which caused more alarm than the fall in the dollar, and which occurred simultaneously with the drop in the currency, is attributed to the reduction of the Federal Reserve Board's purchases in the open market to $10,000,000 weekly, as compared with the former figure of from $35,000,000 to $40,000,000. The Government's next move is obscure, but the fact that Mr. Woodin, the Secretary of the Treasury Department, lunched with President Roosevelt at the White House to-day, is taken to indicate that something is brewing in the monetary line.

SILVER SURMISE

The rise in the price of silver in sympathy with gold has caused further conjecture along the lines that the Government intends to fix a minimum price for silver.—Reuter.

NEW WHITEHALL APPOINTMENTS

SIR LOUIS KERSHAW AND SIR CECIL KISCH

London, Nov. 10. The Secretary of State for India has appointed Sir Louis Kershaw as Assistant Under-Secretary with effect from December 21 next, in succession to Sir Malcolm Seton who is about to retire.

With effect from same date he has appointed Sir Cecil Kisch as Secretary of the Financial Department of the India Office, to be one of the Assistant Under-Secretaries.—British Wireless.

STOP PRESS

Unconfirmed rumours in New York suggest that President Roosevelt will shortly instruct the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to buy newly-mined silver at from 65 to 60 cents per fine ounce.

DOLLFUSS CAUTIOUS

MODIFIED FORM OF MARTIAL LAW

COINCIDENCE OF DATES

Vicenna, Nov. 10.

Stringent measures have been taken by the Government to guard against the possibility of disturbances to-morrow and Sunday.

A Government communique issued this evening announces the re-introduction of the death penalty through courts-martial for the crimes of murder, arson and serious disturbances of peace and order.

The official announcement stresses that the intention of the decision is not to be regarded as the establishment of universal martial law.

Action has been thought necessary owing to the coincidence of the birth of the Austrian Republic and the German elections on November 12.

The Government considers it necessary, therefore, to reinforce its powers to enable it to meet all possible contingencies.—Reuter.

COL. J. H. MORRIS FOR HONGKONG

Successor to Late Col. Kinnaird Watson

London, Nov. 10. Colonel John Hugh Morris, D.S.O., O.B.E., has been appointed Assistant Director of Supplies and Transport, China Command, in succession to the late Colonel Kinnaird Watson.

Colonel Morris will be sailing for Hongkong soon.

The new A.D. of S. and T. in Hongkong has been in the Army since 1908, when he entered the Army Service Corps from the Militia after the South African war.

He served in France during the early days of the war, and in Egypt and Palestine until September, 1919. He was three times mentioned in despatches. He was D.A.D. of Supplies at the War Office from March, 1923, to February, 1927.—Reuter.

Mr. Alfred Hicks, editor of the Hongkong Telegraph returned from home leave by the s.s. Hakozaki Maru, accompanied by his wife.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

"He is such a lovely boy, John. I do wish you would give him a job."

John evaded a direct answer. It wasn't the first time his wife had begged him to place this young man of Margery's on his staff.

But he had been observing him. To-night he would observe him further. The boy soon came in and as usual the family etched around a while before it politely withdrew.

"What do you think of Mr. Black for Senator?" asked John. "I think he's a fine fellow."

"So do I," agreed the Boy. "I think I'll vote for him."

Mother looked at John in puzzled surprise. She knew what her husband thought of the candidate. Only a day ago she had heard him speak of Black as an unscrupulous, thieving scoundrel who would pick pennies off a dead man's eyes.

"Are you in favour of the new viaduct?" asked John.

"What do you think?"

"I asked you."

"I haven't made up my mind yet," said the boy sagely. "It might be a good thing and again it might not."

Always Agreeable

John turned the talk to baseball. "Looks like the series will go six or seven games. But I'm laying my money on the Giants."

"That's right, sir."

Again Mother looked at John in surprise while Margery burst out with, "Why, Dad, you told Mr. Brown you were rooting for Washington."

The boy all this time had been most polite. He was a sweet fellow, and Mother was right. He was deferential and kind and a real Gentleman in every respect. He was immaculate and well-bred. He was most agreeable.

The door-bell rang and in came the Other Fellow. Margery and Mother were cool. John was non-

Isn't It Doggie?

DOGGIE, indeed, and ideal for school wear, in gingham, percale, light weight woolen or crepe. The skirt is planned with wide panels above plait extensions. The collar may be omitted. Designed in four sizes—8, 10, 12 and 14—size 12 requires 2½ yards of 33-inch material, plus ¾ yard of ribbon for the bow at the neck and 2¼ yards of 1¼ inch bias binding.

To secure a pattern and sewing chart of this model, mail this sketch to Julia Boyd, 103 Park Avenue, New York, with 16 cents in coin. Enclose your name, address, size, number of this pattern (No. 30008), and mention this paper.

House Frock

PERCALE, organdie and voile are most suitable for this charming house dress. It is designed in three sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 44 requires 4½ yards of 32-inch material, plus ¾ yard contrast for cuffs and insert.

To secure a pattern and simple sewing chart of this model, tear out this sketch and mail it to Julia Boyd, 103 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y., together with 16 cents in coin. Be sure to enclose, on a separate sheet of paper, your name, full address, your size, the number of this pattern (No. 6327x), and mention the name of this newspaper.

committal. The Boy was friendly and polite.

The Other Fellow was not overburdened with manners. Oh, yes, he had some, but they didn't exactly catch the eye.

In a few minutes, he and John were in a heavy argument about Senator Black. Also they took opposite sides about the viaduct and the fate of the World Series. Finally, Margery's father pretended to be "talked over," although both had been on the same side of the fence from the first.

A Deferential Yes-Man

John and Mother withdrew and left Margery to solve the puzzle of two strings to her bow to-night. But the Boy, who was so polite, said he would come back again and left the field to the Other Fellow. Margery was furious.

"John, do you give the Boy that job?"

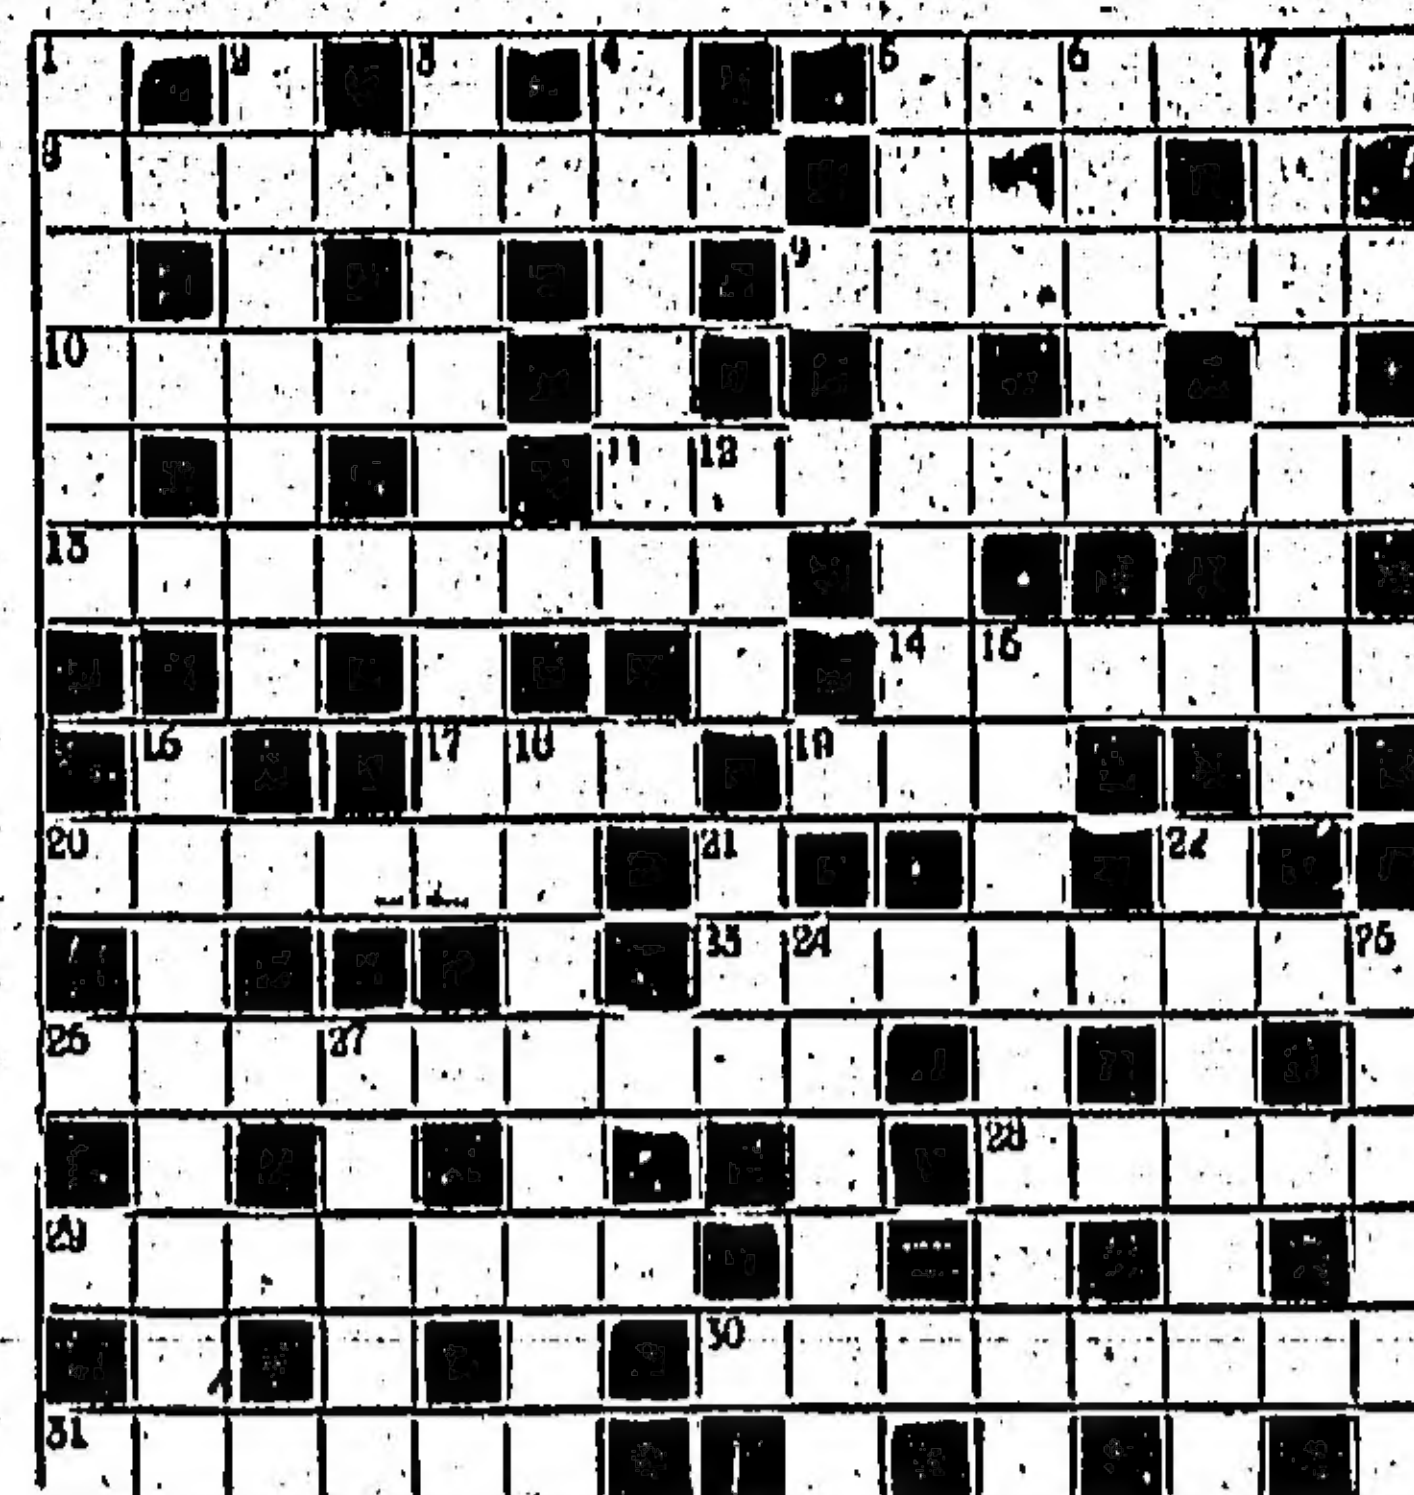

"Never! He's a 'yes' man all the way through. I don't want a bull-head, but I need a tough-fisted fellow with some ideas and the courage to back them, even when he's wrong. I'm giving the job to the Other Fellow. Your chap has no decision. He is too much afraid of offending. In other words, he's too polite to stay and grab his girl, for I hear the door closing now."

There's something for parents to think about. We have too little real politeness, but better so than breeding a child to the point where he will forever stand in his own way and continually step aside for others.

For the October Bride

Choosing a nice gift for the October bride won't be a hard problem if you decide to give her some kind of a bathroom ensemble. The new towels, with matching bath mats, rugs and the like make perfectly handsome gifts. Remember that towels of darker colours are newer than pastel shades. Dark blue is a good choice.

CHAPTER XXIII

"The Incentive of Napoleon Truelove"

Mr. Valentine Morley was not in the least happy when, in obedience to an ungentle shaking, he suddenly opened his eyes and discovered Napoleon Truelove staring at him. "Heavens above!" he grunted. "Isn't one even permitted half a night's sleep?"

"Not on a night like this," replied Napoleon, sadly. "You're wanted, old chap."

"Who wants me?"

"The Cause of Right."

Oh, don't be an ass," growled Morley. "There's no Cause of Right that interferes with a man's just sleep. Stop being cryptic, and let's hear what you've got to say. If you imagine I've engaged myself to go chasing about in my pyjamas—"

"We don't want you in your pyjamas particularly," interposed Napoleon. "You can put on evening clothes, if you like. But I'm going out again into the dark, dark night, so I don't see that you've any cause to complain. P'raps you'd like to change jobs with me?"

"All right, then. Be thankful for small mercies. Get yourself respectable, and then shift down to the lounge hall, and keep your eyes open for horrible sights and your ears peeled for terrible shrieks. The horrible sight will probably be yours truly brought in on a stretcher, and I imagine I shall also be responsible for the terrible shriek."

"I say, what is all this about?" demanded Morley, sitting up.

"My dear chap, it's no good asking me," replied Napoleon. "Ours not to reason why! But, if you really want to know what the particular trouble is at the moment, six people have got loose in varying stages of lunacy, and I am about to join in the happy little search party. As far as I can make out, there's about half a pound to every three hares, so what the hares are running away for rather beats me. However, off I'm going, in charge of a nice stout bobby—"

"What! Are the police here?" cried Morley, jumping up.

"They are. So, all things considered, you can count yourself lucky, old chap. All you've got to do is to keep awake and guard the ladies, and every now and then we'll pop back and tell you how many of us there are left. Isn't life too perfectly lovely for anything?"

Leaving Valentine Morley to dress, or to don such raiment as he considered necessary, Napoleon walked towards the stairs and there received a pleasant little shock—the only pleasant one he could recall that night. Beryl Haines, adorable in a pale blue wrapper (as he wrote in his diary next day), stood at the head of the staircase, watching him.

"Hallo!" he exclaimed. "Why aren't you in bed?"

"Sleep seems to be quite out of the question," replied Beryl. "A bit too worrying, all this. So Miss Fynde's making some tea, and I'm going to her room to drink to the dawn."

"Good idea," nodded Napoleon. "Wouldn't mind joining you."

"Wouldn't it be proper?"

"Wouldn't it? So it wouldn't," grinned Napoleon. "But strict etiquette gets a bit mixed up when you're chasing murderers. Well, look after yourself, Beryl. And good-night, for the twenty-seventh time."

"Nappy!" she exclaimed, laying her hand suddenly on his sleeve.

"What?" he blinked, pretending hard that he was quite unconscious of the fact that her hand was on his sleeve.

"I think you're rather a sport, Nappy," said Beryl.

"What rot," he answered, beaming.

"What else could a feller do?"

"It isn't rot," she responded.

"What's Mr. Morley doing?"

"Gettin' up at this moment to guard the fort," Napoleon informed her. "He turned green with envy when I told him what I'd been picked for, and begged on bended knee to swap."

"Oh, Nappy!" smiled Beryl. "You can't fool me! Mr. Morley's quite satisfied to stay behind, and I know perfectly well that you'd rather stay here and drink tea with us than go out and chase horrible people. But you're going, just the same, and you must let me think it decent of you, if I want to."

Napoleon grew thoughtful.

"I say, Beryl," he said, suddenly. "Do you mean all that? Or is it just to—sort of cheer a feller up, don't you know?"

"I mean it, Nappy."

"Well, of course," he replied. "It's all a lot of frightful bosh, but I'm most frightfully grateful, and all that. And—and if I can do anything to help find your brother, and all that, and so on—well, I'll be dashed glad."

"P'raps I'll try and make you dashed gladder, Nappy," she smiled, and abruptly darted away.

Napoleon looked after her, and then descended the stairs slowly. It occurred to him that if he hurried, he might pitch to the bottom. This would have been unfortunate both for him and for the policeman waiting, with passive resignation, at the foot of that staircase.

"Ready, sir?" asked the policeman.

"Rather," answered Napoleon. "Can't you see me straining at the leash?"

"I beg your pardon, Sir?"

"Never mind—that was poetry," murmured Napoleon. "What are we going to do?"

"We're going to make towards Readington, sir."

"Readington? Where's that?"

"To the north, round the bay. It lies on the other side of the river, but there's a tidy bit of wood to go through first, and we may strike something there."

"I see. How jolly. And—or—what do we do if we strike something?"

"I beg your pardon, sir?"

"What I mean," explained Napoleon, as they left the hotel and scrunched across the gravel, "is this. If we meet one of 'em, do we clutch 'em and cry, 'Got you?'"

The constable smiled. People would have their little joke.

"No—we'll question them, sir," he said. "Or p'raps you won't mind leaving the questioning to me."

"Mind? Goodness, no! It'll be a pleasure."

"And after they've answered the questions, we'll know how to act."

"Righto, constable. When you want me to hit anyone, just give the glad word."

"If you won't mind my mentioning it, sir," said the constable, dropping his voice, "I think we're having rather too many glad words, as it is. We want to go quiet at this business."

"Righto again, constable," answered Napoleon. "Let us emulate the mouse!"

They walked along in silence. Napoleon tried to visualise what lay before them, but happily failed.

They were bearing north-west, and he looked towards the right, hoping to see some gleam of light on the horizon. But there was no gleam yet, no point of diminishing darkness to mark the east.

Soon they reached a spot where the ridge they were traversing turned north, following the contour of the coast. On one side, the sea lay heavily, unilluminated by the moon which seemed imprisoned in great banks of cloud. The wreck was just visible, but they could not detect any small boat making for it. As a matter of fact, the inspector's party had not yet started from the beach. On the other side, trees rose thickly, forming a silent black mass which, when one gazed into it, appeared to be full of little movements. Therefore one preferred not to gaze into it.

But our eyes are continually doing what we do not want them to do, and these silent trees fascinated Napoleon. He peered at them with morbid curiosity, till they seemed to take life and to walk along with them. He turned his head away resolutely; but the head swung back again.

"Constable!" he exclaimed, suddenly.

"Yes, sir," answered the constable.

"I saw something moving in there!"

"Are you sure, sir?"

"Yes, quite. Look—there it is again! Now it's gone."

"I can't see anything, sir," said the constable, and paused.

They stared into the blackness. All was silent around them. Nothing stirred, and the trees seemed to have stopped walking.

"Might have been your imagination," suggested the constable, shaking his head.

"Of course, it might," agreed Napoleon. "But then, on the other hand, constable, it might not. Is it not our bounden duty to investigate?"

"Well, we might have a look," agreed the constable, "although, between you and me, sir, I don't think we're likely to strike anything this side of the river. However—"

He stopped abruptly. A cry rose from the woods. Napoleon grinned frozenly.

"Now we're for it!" he muttered, and, adopting the principle that the best thing to do in an emergency was the thing you liked least, he ran towards the woods as fast as he could.

The constable panted after him, a bad second. As they reached the fringe of trees, the cry rose again from the sombre interior—a howl of one in fear—and there came a frantic, scuffling sound.

"Hey!" shouted a voice. "Whoa! Stop!"

The next moment, a flying form shot into Napoleon, and sent him flat. He had a vague vision of swinging arms and legs, at which he clutched unsuccessfully. Then the form that had swooped upon him swooped off again, and crashed through the trees. After it crashed the constable.

Napoleon sat up. He was now alone with his feelings and his thoughts, and neither were pleasant company. Momentarily winded, he was incapable of joining in the chase, and by the time he had regained his breath and discovered that no bones were broken, the woods had grown silent once more, and a great black door appeared to have shut him out from the rest of the world.

"Now what?" he thought.

He might rise and flounder in the track of the chase, but he had no notion of the direction to pursue, and his brain was still a little muddled. He thought he must have banged his head against a tree, stump or something when he fell. Yes—there was the stump. He felt it with his hand.

"Why the deuce did you choose to grow in this particular spot, tree stump?" he grumbled. "Did you know I was coming?"

He got to his knees, and then to his feet. A longing for home assailed him. Home! Where was that? Wasn't it a hotel, and a cup of tea, and someone frightfully jolly handing the cup to him and telling him he was a frightful sport? That vision staided him, and, all at once, he laughed.

"Your head ain't so bad, Nappy," he told himself. "Just close your eyes a minute, and then open them again—and then go on and find Guy."

He closed his eyes, and opened them. And, when he opened them, he found Guy looking at him.

CHOPPER ATTACK*AMERICAN WOMEN'S NIGHT OF TERROR

Shanghai, Nov. 10.

Mrs. and Miss Cheatham, American residents here, underwent a terrifying experience in the early hours of this morning.

They were awakened by cries from their servants' quarters and found a coolie, who had run amok, using a chopper on their "boy."

The two American women were unable to get immediate local aid; so they telephoned to the police in the meantime holding the inner door against the coolie and the boy who were struggling to gain admittance.

On arrival of the police, the coolie was arrested and the boy in an unconscious state, was taken to hospital. He is not expected to live.—Our Own Correspondent.

SIR J. REITH ON LACK OF LEADERSHIP

"AVERAGE MAN A POOR SPECIMEN"

"SUNDAY SCHOOL TALK" ABOUT AMBITION

Sir John Reith, of the B.B.C., made some outspoken comments on modern education, modern parents, and on choosing careers for children at a luncheon at the Aldwych Club last month. He exaggerated his statements, he said at the outset, in order to emphasise the points he wished to make.

He declared "that the present lack of leadership, the inferiority complex, individually and nationally and the appalling mass of mediocrity, were leading us into more serious economic trouble than we have hitherto known."

"I am not pessimistic about the future of this country, but there is decadence, inferiority, and mediocrity rampant all over the land," he continued, "a whole train of misfits in every line of activity, and an immense amount of human misery or, at any rate, discontent."

"What effort," he asked, "does the average parent make in leading his boys towards careers? At the age of about 10 a boy can talk with some intelligence about his likes and dislikes, and a parent of some intelligence can get them out of him. In a few years a boy can talk of his aptitudes and the reverse: inclinations and disinclinations. Two or three years later, round about 16, I believe the average boy can have chosen his career."

"If a boy is more or less settled by 16 he has a start of eight to ten years over the other fellow."

CAPACITY FOR WORK.

"The average man, in my view, is a pretty poor specimen, and the average intelligence, in my view, is very low. Is it realised that the first class man can do something like five times the amount of work of the average man? It is largely the product of early training."

"People in need of money will say to a boy leaving school at 16 or 17, 'You must earn money.' They try to make him start in any sort of capacity, earning 25s. to 30s. a week. The boy stays dead ended. They get that money which they require, and for which they are prepared to sacrifice the whole future of their son."

"I conclude that nine out of ten parents consciously or unconsciously are disregarding of their children's future."

"A boy ought to serve an apprenticeship, to a trade or profession, or in some way secure a recognisable qualification which has a marked value."

"I left school a bit younger than I ought to have done. I was put into engineering. I realised before I was there many months that I was in the wrong job. For five years I had to get up at quarter to five every morning and work a 56-hour week in a factory. I had five years' apprenticeship in locomotive shops from 1908-1913. I am a tradesman locomotive fitter, and I can claim a market value. That gives me a lot of satisfaction."

LAZY UNDERGRADUATES.

"Ninety-nine out of 100 people who come down from a University without a degree have done so because they have not the guts or the intelligence to carry the job through."

"There is too much Sunday school talk about ambition. I maintain that ambition for the young is worth, as a whole, a good deal more than many of the things they give you in Sunday school. How many boys cultivate the instinct of the boss?"

"If you look around you will agree that one of our first troubles is lack of leadership. It is evident in every kind of line—politics and industry. It can be traced to its origin in the nursery or the Sunday school."

"The first Headmaster who sets out to capture the leading positions in the country for his boys will capture them. The boy who sets out to attain to a certain position has everything strong in his favour."

"I do not think you can much increase a man's intelligence; I think a man is either born intelligent or unintelligent. Something can be done with the unintelligent, but I doubt if it is very very much."

"If we could deal with this business in the nursery I believe the country would be happier and better placed in world affairs, and its individuals more contented."

VIEWS ON THE SPEECH.

Comments on Sir John Reith's statements were made as follows:

Dr. Cyril Norwood, Headmaster of Harrow.—A great deal has been done towards helping boys to find out what careers they are fit for and the methods by which they can be brought into touch with them. I think the majority will always be found to be what Sir John calls mediocrities, and what I should call honest men and women doing their duty. I should be very sorry to be set deliberately to train boys to be bosses.

Rev. Ernest G. Braham, General Secretary, National Sunday School Union.—It is obvious that anyone who knows anything about Sunday schools to-day would not make any such statement. Modern Sunday schools, rather than crippling and crushing the ambition of children by a species of repression, does exactly the opposite. All our activities are towards the engendering of ambition and leadership.

Mr. Bernard Shaw.—Mediocrity will always be rampant. There will always be 10 per cent. of superior people and 90 per cent. of tag and bobtail. I wish Sir John Reith would do a little more broadening himself of that kind and save us from the appalling bunk that the B.B.C. is beginning to send us over the ether.

"WAR PART OF

PROFESSOR LOW AND FORCE

"PEACE HUMBUG"

Professor A. M. Low, speaking at Christ Church, Victoria-street, London, said that as things were at present, with the general methods of conducting our existence, war and unemployment were absolutely essential.

"They are the logical results of the present system," he said. "I am not so foolish as to advocate war, but it is necessary to have war to maintain the system. I do not consider that we live in a civilised world. We are more civilised in the direction of war than in any other direction."

"Many people tell us that the present state of depression is due to the last great war. It is due more to the illogical way in which we conducted the beastly thing."

"In the last war, something—it may have been our better feelings got the upper hand and we came away hungry and ragged with none of the goods of the people we were trying to kill. That is illogical. It is absurd to talk of killing gracefully. In a war the only logical course to pursue is to kill everyone that you can possibly find."

He suggested that the basis of the whole modern system was force.

"Our one object in life is to go one better than the man next door and the only logical outcome of that is force. I am not in favour of the peace humbug that nearly everyone talks. The police have established themselves entirely by force. People tell us that peace is preserved by the tact, dignity and quickness of the police. In their hearts they know it is not true."

MAJESTY OF THE LAW.

"The police are armed. We don't choose our policemen because they are good chess players or members of a debating society, but, even if they don't carry guns or truncheons, their arms and fists happen to be stronger than anybody else's. The majesty of the law would not be worth sixpence if it had not force to carry it into effect."

"Most of us base our conditions of living on the comical idea that everyone is really kindly. They may be in the spirit, but they are not in their bodily strength. The struggle to increase armament and the increasing struggle to discover new poison gases for the purpose of defence is humbug," said Professor Low. What we should say is: "We have got more than most people, and we are going to keep it."

"In the next war the word 'civilian' will lose all its meaning. If we try to alter force it might mean the martyrdom of a whole nation. If we try to cure war, we have a bigger job than we imagine—we shall need a complete change of heart and mind."

"There are only two alternatives—war and more war, or Christianity."

WON'T SEE HIS SON'S PLAY HAS NEVER BEEN TO THEATRE AND NEVER WILL

London.
James Laver, author of the novel "Nymph Errant" which is being produced as a play by C. B. Cochran with Gertrude Lawrence in the leading part, is a lucky young man.
He has a pleasant job in a London museum, a pleasant flat, leisure for writing and a beautiful actress-wife. He also has a father of whom he is fond—but his father will not go to see his play. It is rather a "naughty" play.
Mr. Laver senior is in business as a stationer in Liverpool and he is also a Methodist local preacher, with strict views about the theatre and about amusements generally.
He declares he has never been to the theatre—except once, when he heard a sermon delivered—and does not intend to start going at his time of life, even though it be to his own son's play. Neither his father nor his mother nor his grandparents ever went to the theatre. They did not "hold with it." His wife also disapproves of the stage.
However, they are both pleased at their son's success and Mr. Laver says he believes in giving boys their heads.—Reuter.

Nice.
A school for croupiers has been started here.
Now that roulette is authorised by law in every casino in France, it is expected that there will be a great demand for croupiers to man the tables.
Years of training are needed to form a really efficient croupier, who needs great agility of mind and must be able to calculate and multiply in a few seconds.
Mistakes cost the bank dear, as gamblers usually only complain when they are paid too little.—Reuter.

CANADA WATCHES U.S. RECOVERY PLAN

Canadian industrial plants like the power plant and pulp mill at Shawinigan Falls, Quebec, shown above, are already feeling an impetus from N.R.A. activities across the border. Exchange of products between those two "best customers and neighbours," the United States and Canada, is also increasing.

BY GILBERT DRAPER
Written for the Hongkong
Telegraph

Montreal, Oct. 12.
The Dominion of Canada's 10,000,000 people are watching almost to a man the great N.R.A. experiment that is transforming their southern neighbour; watching closely, because its effects in Canada are already being felt and may be felt increasingly as the programme unfolds.

Canadians are already paying higher prices for many commodities, coal, gasoline, milk, bread.

Canadian business has already felt the stimulation of buying across the border, of foodstuffs, electrical energy, wood, woodpulp, shingles, nickel, asbestos, fish, raw wool.

Certain labour troubles developing here are blamed on the "new deal" labour in the States.

If monetary inflation becomes part of the programme, Canada might be forced to follow suit because of her close business relations.

But Canada, following the N.R.A.'s progress with absorbed interest, is far from convinced that it is an example to be followed. The feeling is very general here that "conditions in Canada are different."

This "watchful waiting" attitude is well expressed by Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, when he said, "Let us watch the big movement that is going on in the United States with sympathy and interest."

Hon. H. H. Stevens, Canada's minister of trade and commerce, believes many "new deal" principles have already been established in the Dominion.

But do not let us be stampeded into aping what they are doing."

Reforms Already Made

For one thing, Canadians feel that many of the reforms which the N.R.A. is bringing to the States are old stuff in the Dominion. Back before the World War, steps were taken in Canada to insure against the appalling banking debacle which swept the United States last March.

Two and a half years ago Canada's basic industry, wheat, was stabilized at great expense to the government.

As Stevens puts it, the United States is hoping to develop a banking system somewhat similar to what Canada already has; and that as regards agriculture, the Canadian government "did in connection with our great wheat industry just what they are trying to organize themselves over there to do."

But Ottawa is watchful. Cabinet ministers and senior government officials are watching the events below the border with keenest interest, for the Dominion may soon have to decide on an economic relief programme to counteract the effect of the N.R.A. on Canadian business.

Canada's new political party, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, which originated in the west, and claims to be fashioned along the lines of the British Labour party, regards the N.R.A. movement in the United States as a big step in the right direction, and would be likely to regard a similar movement in Canada.

But this socialistically-inclined "third party" believes it will fall in the long run "because it relies on the profit motive."

A Montreal CCF leader declares "The N.R.A. will crash on the desire of the capitalists to make large profits. They will not follow through with Roosevelt. They will boost prices to impossible levels and bring failure to the whole project."

N.R.A. Boosts Trade

But already effects of the N.R.A. are plainly to be seen in Canada. It has very definitely stimulated Canadian business. The increased buying in the States has reflected itself in purchases of Canadian goods.

Canada's sales to her southern neighbour were 43 per cent higher in July than in July, 1932, larger indeed than at any period since December, 1931.

Canada's exports to the United States reached their lowest point in April, $8,382,000. Compare this with $17,343,000 in July, and one effect of the N.R.A. becomes evident.

The other side of the shield was brighter, too. American manufacturers were able also to sell more to Canada. Imports of fibres, textiles and their products increased from $1,455,000 a year to $22,283,000. There was a slight but definite increase in American sales to Canada of manufactures of iron from 3,725,000 to $3,858,000. Automobiles and parts were shipped across the line in greater quantity, and there was an increase of rolling mill products.

The labour and wage policies of the N.R.A. have also had their effects, indirectly, but not less effectively. A director of the Canadian Manufacturers' Protective Association told the writer that the dress cutters' strike recently called in Montreal was blamed on American policies, and said the scheme was unsettling Canadian labour with false hopes of higher wages and shorter hours.

Newsprint Code Causes Stir

The code for the newsprint industry originally had a provision that would have caused reverberations in Canada. It provided that the president could impose a duty or limitation on imports that tended to nullify the aims of the code.

That would have meant that Canadian manufacturers in this vital industry would have had to adhere closely to the provisions of the U. S. code if they were to market their product in the United States, as most of them do. Modification of this code is believed to make this less imminent, but it shows how a code in an outside country may easily affect Canadian industry.

In British Columbia, shingle manufacturers recently met at Vancouver and agreed to operate under conditions of wages and hours identical with those imposed on those of the United States under the N.R.A. code. As British Columbia shingles enter the U.S. duty-free, the Canadian companies have put themselves on a parity with U.S. mills operating under the N.R.A.

Most Canadian leaders appear to feel that though there may be some good features in the N.R.A. plan which might later be incorporated in the Canadian business system, the "ballyhoo" and high-pressure methods needed would not fit with Canadian temperament. Meanwhile, they prefer to watch and wait.

SCIENTIST CLASSIFIES BAD DRIVERS

Ames, Ia., Oct. 2.

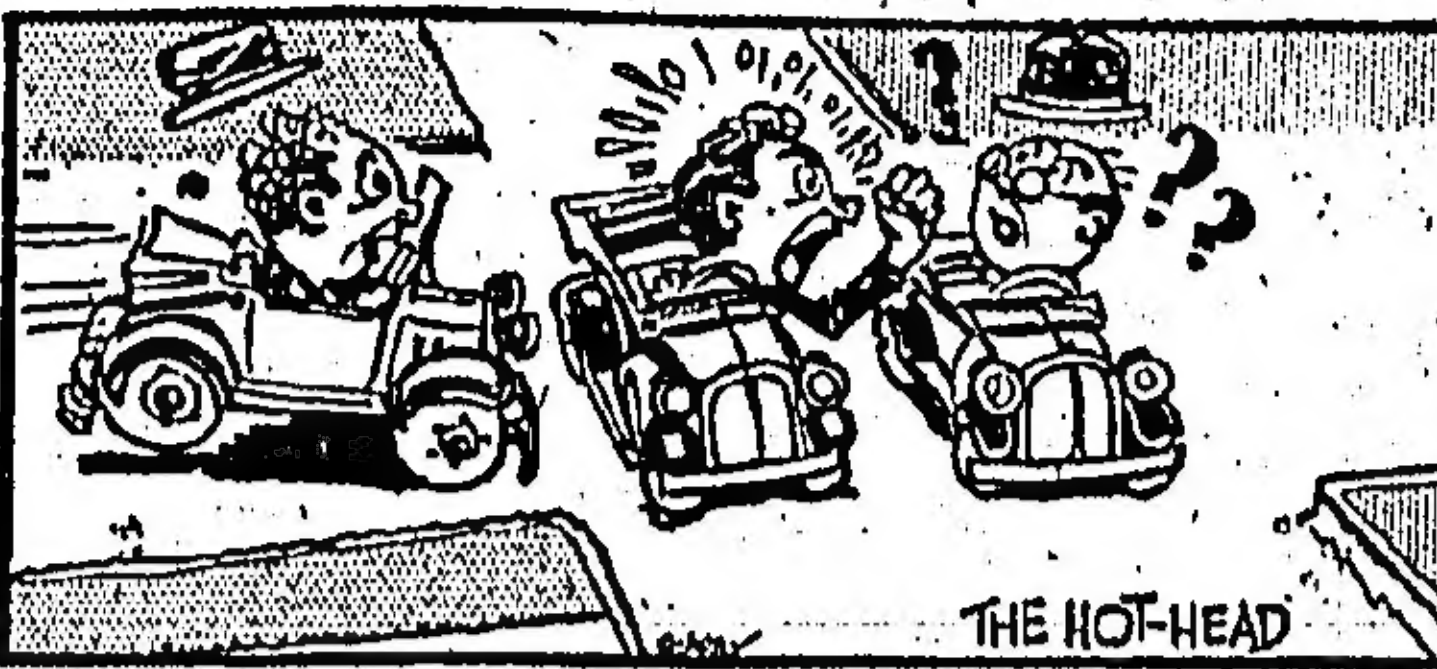

When plotting your automobile peacefully over the highways, beware of several types of persons who may be coming your way.

These types as defined by Alvin R. Lauer, doctor of psychology at Iowa State College here, are: the his salary is not adequate for a man of his ability.

Add Anger, and Look Out!

"When such a person is also easily angered, a very bad combination is found. The paranoiac is always angered by something and thus is always on a strain. He may be vindictive and deliberately paranoiac and hot-headed; the timid soul; the drug addict; the insane; two age groups, and those under mental and physical strain.

Dr. Lauer has made an extensive study of more than 550 drivers of an accident-prone group of commercial drivers, and finds that most of the accidents in which the drivers were involved were caused by these types of drivers.

Of the paranoiac and hot-headed driver, Dr. Lauer says:

"When so affected, the person thinks everyone is trying to get the best of him, his landlord desires to see him in the poor house, his wife tries to make life hard for him, the children purposely destroy his personal belongings, the neighbours do not respect him, and stop his car suddenly to 'show' the driver behind him. He is full of alibis and is equally full of trouble."

The timid soul is just the opposite of the paranoiac and hot-headed person.

In this class, Dr. Lauer informs, are a large group of women, especially the more delicate ones, and effeminate men. In an effort to compensate for a lack of physical vigour, this type of driver is apt to do most anything in driving.

People in this class should not drive where traffic conditions are tangled, and where an emergency is likely to arise. A lack of confidence in themselves is a sure sign of an accident sooner or later.

In the two classes, drug addict and insanity, physical faults are present which cannot be remedied by teaching. The only cure for this evil is legislative measures which will remove drivers of these types from the roads.

The scientist suggests physical examination in these cases, and that drivers so handicapped be barred from receiving licences. Stops have been taken in some states toward this end. These states have compulsory drivers' licences, and to secure driving permits, would-be motorists have to undergo strenuous tests.

Age Extremes Dangerous

The two age groups which are accident prone include the older man whose blood pressure goes up due to his age, and impulsive youth.

"The driver with a rising blood pressure finds he cannot manipulate his car well," Dr. Lauer relates. "He becomes nervous and under a strain. Some very good drivers thus lose their nerve and become accident prone."

"Again, a medical examination will do much to eliminate the unfit. Any marked cases of arteriosclerosis and heart disturbances should be rejected as drivers."

The accident-prone group in the strains as a cause of accidents can be eliminated very easily by self-treatment on the part of the driver, Dr. Lauer contends.

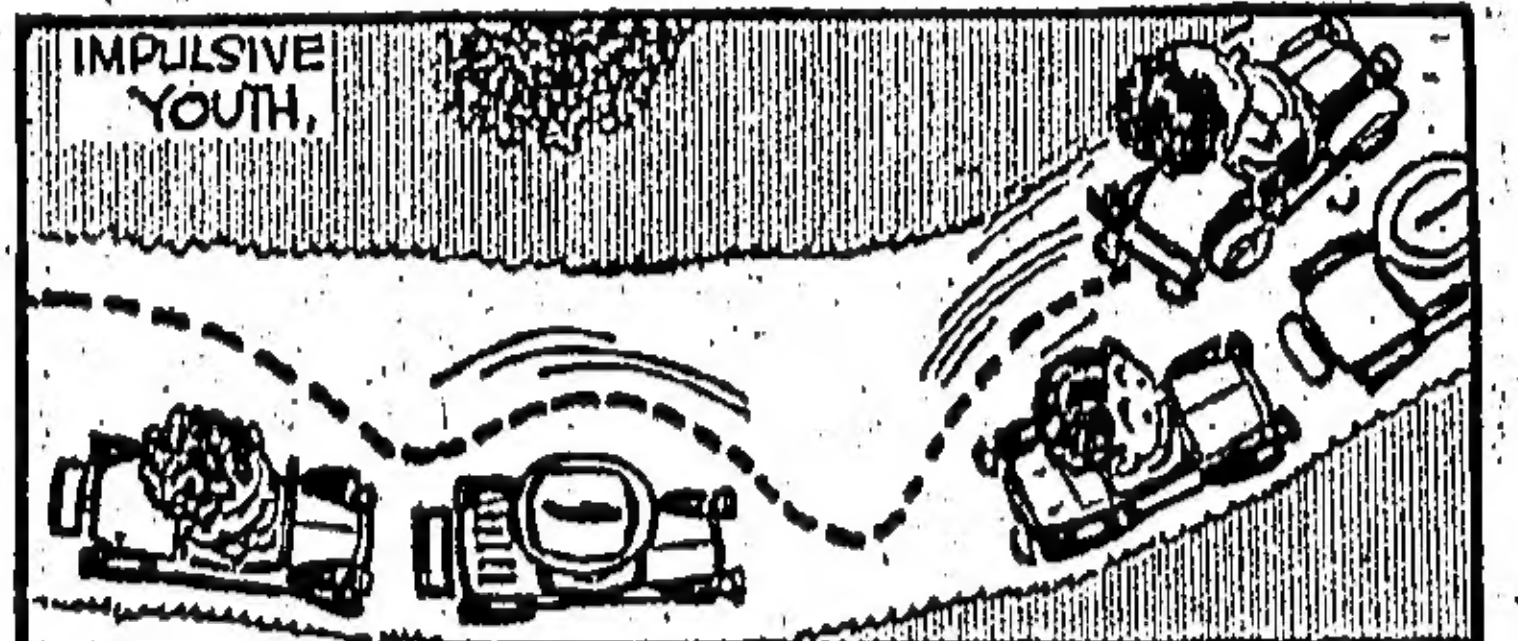

"Loss of sleep, extreme fatigue, worry over business and similar conditions cause many accidents," he says.

Peace of Mind Important

"Chronic illness of the driver or unpleasant home conditions, has accounted for a certain number of accident-prone individuals. The drivers became accident prone after such conditions developed."

Irate motorists are often heard to hurl the accusation, "dumb," at some other driver. Often this is just the trouble with the offending driver.

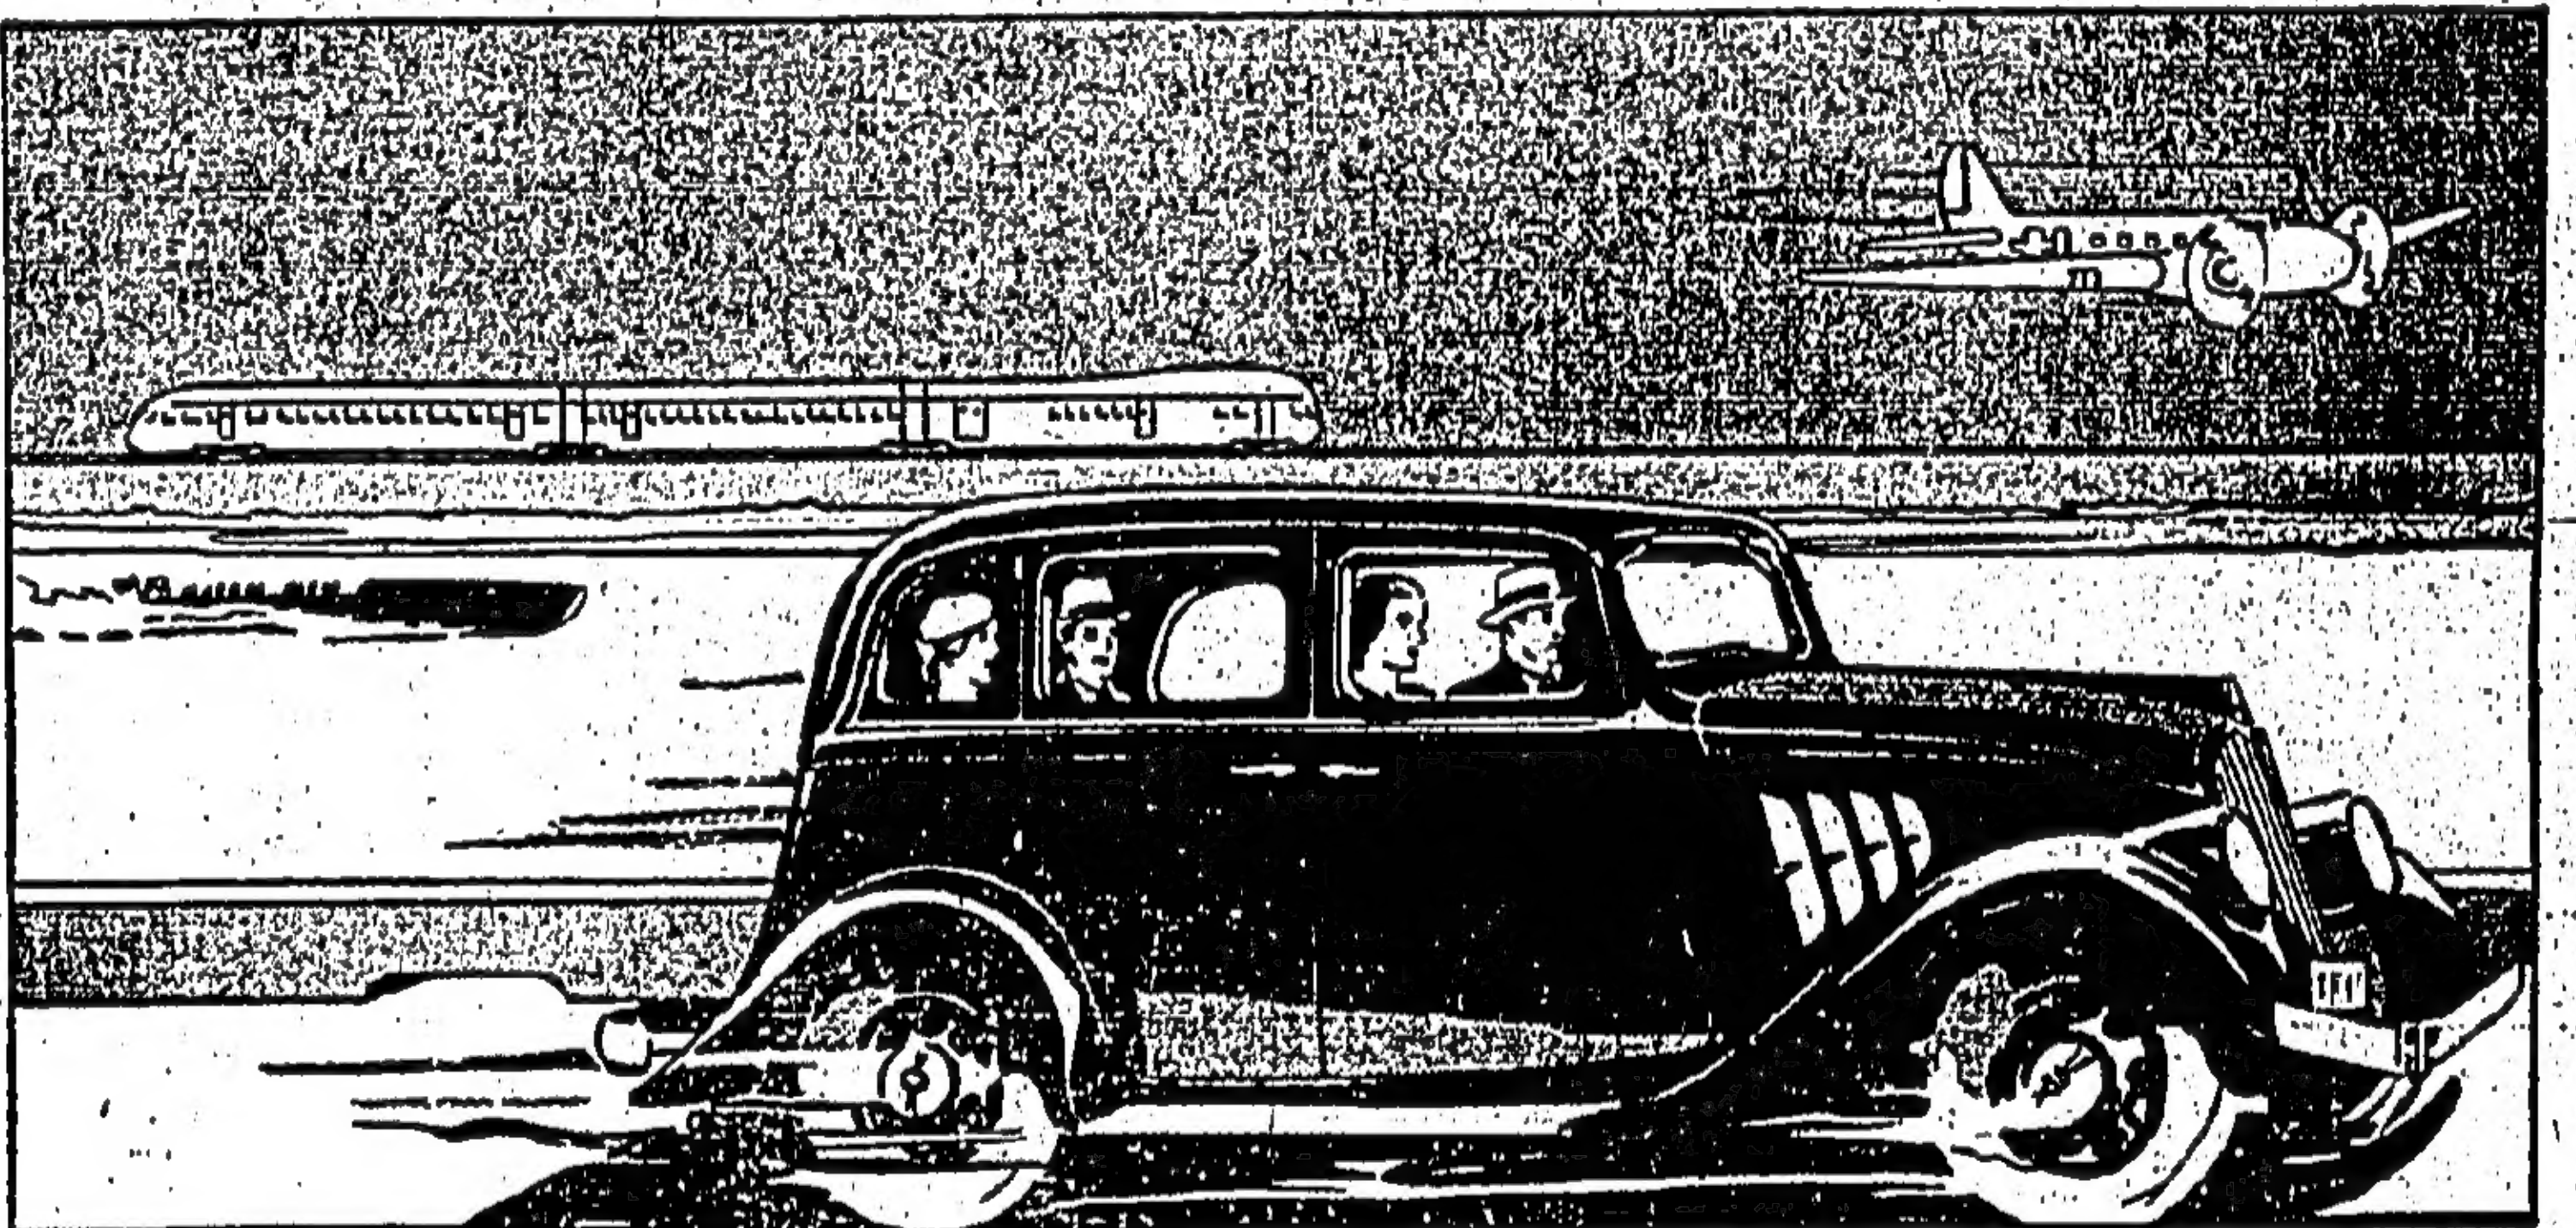

"It would hardly be proper for a psychologist to discuss accidents without mentioning the relation to intelligence," the scientist explains. "When a man is doxerous, has a great deal of strength and uses it efficiently, he is said to be athletic. In the same way a person who has mental ability, and can use it efficiently, is said to be intelligent."

age group between 20 and 24 are made so by infantilism. These drivers never grow up and are forever taking the rash chances of their youth. Accidents frequently occur to such persons. Undue mental and physical

"Many drivers are intelligent, but they fail to use their intellect in driving. Those with low intelligence quotient are slow to understand a situation. They use poor judgment and generally get into trouble."

GREAT SAY OWNERS

World's Fastest Speedboat Car Wood, 124.91 miles per hour New Union Pacific Railroad motor powered train, 110 M. P. H. Willys Model 77 Sedan New Boeing Commercial Airplane N.Y. to San Francisco, 20 hrs. (2763 miles)

The reason owners of Willys Model "77" say, "It is a 'Great' car" is because it fills a present day need for swift, comfortable transportation at low cost—a low cost for the car itself and for its operation.

Road performance is the infallible proof of efficiency; by all means test the "77" in a vigorous ride—go over bad roads and notice its good springing and the ample engine power to negotiate them—try the hills and marvel at the ease with which this low priced car climbs them. . . . There are sound reasons why the "77" is a fine performing car—reasons that result from its clever design and because of the sturdy materials used in its construction.

You will be delighted with the convenient controls—the remarkably light steering, the ease of parking. . . . It follows the latest developments in streamlining and actually reduces petrol consumption by splitting the forward air pressure instead of pushing against it. Bodies are all steel which are proven to be stronger—therefore safer. There is no costly replacement of wood rotted by climate or insects.

Mechanically, the "77" contains all up-to-date essential specifications—gadgets are eliminated to avoid extra cost and trouble to the owner.

The "77" is the only stock car that obtains 35 miles to the Imperial Gallon and can show a speed of 70 miles per hour. . . . It is a "Great" car because it takes you swiftly and comfortably to your destination and saves money every mile travelled.

ONE MILE PER POUND

Burning a coal gas which is generated by the car itself, an automobile built by J. A. MacDonald of Kenya, South Africa, is being displayed in London. Coal is burned in the rear of the car and the gas is taken directly to the engine. One filling of 250 pounds of coal will create enough gas to drive the car from 250 to 300 miles. Above at the left is a view of the car's engine, with hand pointing to the gas connection tube. At right the driver is putting coal in the burner.

THE WILLYS "77"

Many New Features

FINE STREAMLINE

While the world has entered an era of new economies, being caused by the general business depression, there has been no decrease of desire for possession of a motor car by the average individual.

To meet the new condition, The Willys-Overland Company has brought into production an entirely new model; one that is modestly priced and has low upkeep cost—yet maintains the necessities for comfort, acceleration, speed and longevity. This car, the Willys Model "77" can obtain 33/35 miles to the Imperial Gallon and many owners have found that a tankful (6-3/4 Imperial Gallons) is ample for a week's normal running—while high speed is unused by most car owners this car has ample reserve power and can obtain over 70 miles per hour.

In appearance, the Willys "77" sets an undoubted pace for streamlining which all manufacturers are now interesting themselves in. The "77" splits the frontal air pressure instead of wasting petrol to push it aside—the body lines are extremely practical and follow the tendency of aviation design.

Many specifications of more costly cars are found in the "77"—All steel bodies—"X" member type frame—Four hydraulic shock absorbers—"Floating Power" type of rubber engine mounting—Water, oil and petrol pumps—down draft carburetor with pump—Tool steel seating for exhaust valve (grinding) unnecessary under 30,000 miles) and numerous other up-to-the minute improvements.

All gadgets, which increase car cost and complicate running efficiency have been eliminated from the Willys "77" design and the result is a car which gives fine transportation at very low cost.

WHAT NEXT?

Wheelbarrows equipped with balloon tires have made their appearance in Detroit. It is said that "barrows" so equipped are easier to shove and that more traction is obtained from this type of tire.

CARE OF LAMPS A Few Hints

BURNED out bulbs in headlamps or other lights on the car may point to overcharging by the generator, but they may also be a danger signal for other troubles. They may, for instance, point to the danger of overcharging the battery or of overheating the generator, unless the entire charging system is watched carefully.

ORDINARILY, even with the generator charging at between 15 and 20 amperes, which is the usual winter day rate, there should be no worry of burning out the lights or of overcharging the battery. For the extra amount of juice put into the battery is taken out more quickly by the starter, and the greater use of the lights on winter nights demands more work from the generator.

But that is all right while the circuits in the lighting and ignition systems are complete and there is nothing in the way to cause the breakdown of one of them. Let a battery terminal corrode, for example, to the extent of breaking the contact and opening the circuit, and all the juice intended for the battery will pound through the lights.

Let the terminal of one lamp jar loose, or any other contact break, such as those at the ammeter, and the generator power that should be distributed in proper proportion throughout the system would concentrate on the lights to which contact remains. The result is a heavy overcharge of voltage and a quick breakdown of the bulbs.

WHEN a light burns out, therefore, merely replacing it with another bulb will not help. That bulb may get along well for a short time and then repeat the performance.

Shorts or grounds do not cause lights to burn out, for they reduce voltage. It is an open circuit, a loose or corroded connection in the generator charging line, that is the real cause.

Most frequent faults are found at the battery terminals where corrosion takes place. These should be scraped clean and tightened. Sometimes the ammeter terminals, which are in series between the generator and battery, will jar loose and cause an open circuit. Water, dirt or jarring may cause a poor contact between the terminal switch and the switch posts.

These should be tested after it has been seen that the battery is not the cause of the trouble.

BY keeping an eye on the ammeter and knowing the rate at which the generator charges properly, the motorist can detect an open circuit almost immediately.

This can be suspected as soon as the ammeter needle jumps above the regular charging rate. If it is not fixed almost immediately, a bulb will burn out, for the bulb filament is the weakest spot in the shortened closed circuit.

THE proper rate of generator charge depends upon the condition under which the car is operated.

If driven mostly at night, the generator needs to be adjusted to give a greater charge in order to replace the energy used by the lights at night. If driven on short trips, the generator should be similarly adjusted.

We do not sell
"Talking Points"

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

When customers write in, as many are doing these days, stating that they have found the Ford V-8 better than we said it was, that is how we prefer it to be.

I say this for the benefit of a Ford dealer who chides me for not claiming all that might be claimed in favor of our car.

If the people who use our cars every day are not praising them, it matters little what we may say. The last word must be spoken by the car itself, and the owner who tells his next door neighbor how his car behaves in actual service is the only effective advertiser.

That is why we do not stress "talking points" in our car. The Ford V-8 is built on principles, not on "points." Most of the "talking points" in motor cars are of little or no importance to the performance or value of the car.

Take weight, for example. It is not just a "talking point" with us; it is a basic principle which we keep constantly in mind when we design a car.

Weight has much to do with the cost of the car. It costs us money to remove excess weight. It costs you money if we leave it in.

When people talk about the cost of running a car—or, to put it in advertising language, "economy of operation"—why do they not give more thought to weight?

The more dead weight a car drags around, the more it costs to run.

To carry passengers costs very little. It is car weight that runs up the gas bills. If we design an economical engine, and then waste the economy in moving a mass of unnecessary car weight, what has been gained?

By keeping weight where it belongs—as trainers do with a race-horse or an athlete—the horse-power per pound of car remains high. To get the most miles and most power out of a gallon of gas, a car should not be over-heavy for its purpose. A quick, responsive pick-up and reserve speed—which means reserve power—requires careful attention to car-weight and strength.

The Ford V-8 is not a light car—it is as heavy as its design requires, and much stronger than it need be for safety. But it has no useless weight. Strength has been obtained without dead heavy bulk.

What we offer is a car, built to do certain things, and sure to do them.

that the bank owned property in Canton.Witness added that Chan Mung-half share.Subject to investigation therefore, this property could not be considered assets of the Chuen Tak Bank?—I am told Chan Mung-hong owns a half share.After further questions the Official Receiver asked: Is not your estimate of two and a half lakhs of assets very optimistic?Witness replied that he was telling the Court what he knew.The receiving order was then made by His Lordship.

BUY A FLANDERS POPPY

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the Sky
The larks still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead, Short days ago,
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high;
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

John McCrae.

The foe is now poverty, disease, disablement—the bitter aftermath of war for so many of its direct and indirect victims. The Poppy Day Fund stands as a barrier, stronger every year, between those who have no other help and the slough of deepest despair.

GERMANY'S OLIVE BRANCH

It is much too early to assess the importance of Germany's olive branch; but the mere fact that it has been offered at all is the happiest of beginnings. Nothing could give brighter promise of a speedy adjustment of immediate differences than that the door so sharply slammed by Herr Hitler a month ago should be re-opened by the Nazi Chancellor. An awkward situation is relieved and a favourable impression created, bespeaking a ready willingness to listen sympathetically to the proposals which are to be submitted in concrete form next week. Had the initiative come from other quarters, the atmosphere of tension must have continued and the prejudice stimulated by recent events must have remained hard. Europe is this much to the good at all events. As far as can be gathered from the few hints afforded, the object of Germany's proposals is to furnish the conditions under which she may, without loss of face, resume her place in the councils of the League and in the Disarmament Conference. The opportunity provided for calm reflection in the interval since withdrawal appears, at this stage, to have been wisely used; world opinion upon Germany's diplomatic policies, convincingly expressed, undoubtedly created the desired impression. Whether or not this is accurate assumption remains to be seen; although it is quite obvious that several difficult hurdles will need to be cleared. Germany will propose, it is predicted, some re-organisation of the League of Nations, a fact which lends zest—modified by a certain uneasiness—to the expected declaration. The importance of this feature cannot possibly be estimated until the details are disclosed. The proposals may easily be highly constructive and readily acceptable. It is on the question of Germany's rearmament that the outcome finally depends. German circles at Geneva talk of symbolical rearmament—a term capable of a host of interpretations. The one theme running through all, however, must be the clear de-

NOTES OF THE DAY

DOLLAR AND POUND

The sharp slide taken by the American dollar claims close attention. A section of London opinion is already agitated and is urging the Chancellor of the Exchequer to counter-measures and the tone of Mr. Chamberlain's answer certainly cannot be interpreted as ruling out the likelihood of a currency battle. Non-committal regarding his intentions, he emphasises the Government's policy of retaining the independence of sterling; to put it another way, retaining liberty of action. The fact is that no-one is fully aware of the distance in depreciation that President Roosevelt is prepared to travel. Buying in dollars might prove a highly costly business to the British Treasury.

LONDON'S STRENGTH

The trouble with some people at home is that they want it both ways. Britain's financial affairs have been so completely pulled round in the last two years that London can fairly claim to be the strongest financial centre in the world to-day, with the best credit. In times of uncertainty such as now prevail, loose funds circulating in the world naturally tend to gravitate to London, undoing any effort the Government may be making to keep the pound at normal parity with the dollar. Only reckless gambling with the country's finances could influence the position, with the probability that our own stability would be wrecked.

INSURANCE CHANCES

The Government's proposed changes in the administration of insurance benefit will be read with very mixed feelings. It has always been evident that to get the scheme back on to a real insurance basis at the earliest possible date was urgently desirable. It is probable that a change in "transitional benefit" in its present form could not in any case be delayed indefinitely. On the other hand, the benefits of the scheme as a social reform have been so great and so universal, as admitted at a time of rising prices is a policy which will require a great deal of defending. The drop from 26 weeks' benefit straight to 18 seems in particular open to challenge. The bright features of the plan are those covering training and physical fitness. No benefit for sinners is a good motto.

LA GUARDIA'S SUCCESS

The Fusion forces in New York, led by Major La Guardia, scored a smashing victory against the Tammany ticket, headed by Mayor O'Brien, and the Washington Interference represented in the candidacy of Mr. Joseph V. McKee. Both the Fusion and McKee tickets were fighting against Washington domination. The campaign as a result took on a national significance and the decision of the voters will probably be far-reaching. Mr. Farley, Mr. McKee's backer, is credited with political skill, but in the very opening stages of the contest he appears to have missed a trick. At the meeting of the Democratic State Committee in Albany a coup by John F. Curry brought about the adoption of a resolution pledging the members individually to support the regular Democratic candidates—the O'Brien ticket. Mr. Farley was either outmanoeuvred or feared to risk a showdown. With this internal problem of the Democrats as an important factor, Major La Guardia scored easily. He promises a thorough cleansing of the stables and it will not come before it was needed.

mand for re-armament in some form or other, bringing the interested Powers smartly up against the real difficulty in the whole situation. It cannot be doubted that no agreement is possible unless some degree of rearmament is granted to the Nazi Reich. Neither is there much room for doubt that Herr Hitler will re-arm, more or less, with or without an agreement. Yet, and here the crux of the problem lies, can Britain, France or any other country express consent without breach of principles, even although refusal may not make much difference one way or the other? Will yielding an inch mean the loss of a yard? That is the question, and it contains sufficient serious implications to test the wit of statesmen to its uttermost limit.

ROBERT LYND on

BRINGING UP FATHER

AS one reads the letter of the 17-year-old girl who wanted to know what to do with her parents, who had forbidden her to smoke cigarettes, one could not help feeling that here was a cry from the heart.

"My parents," she complains—she calls them "my problem parents" in another sentence in the letter—"still treat me and punish me as if I were a little girl."

Here surely is a case that calls for the sympathy of every friend of liberty. It throws even a more sinister light on the tyranny of the modern parent than the case of the girl of 15 who threatened to leave home unless she were given a latchkey and was told all the same that she couldn't have one.

TURNING THE TABLES

Fortunately, there is a growing movement nowadays in favour of preventing parents from interfering with the free development of the personality of the young. It is true that this object can be achieved only by interfering with the free development of the personality of parents. It depends for its success on saying "Don't" to the parent while ceasing to say "Don't" to the child.

The new commandment for parents in relation to their children, indeed, is "Don't say 'Don't'."

This, perhaps, is only fair. For centuries children have had to endure all the punishments and compulsions. It is time that parents and nurses had a taste of the same medicine. Why should a nurse have the right to put a child in the corner for losing its temper if the child has not an equal right to put the nurse in the corner for losing her temper? Is not bad temper a more serious fault in a grown-up person than in an infant? Yet it is only the infants who have hitherto been punished for it.

THE SUPER-LOGICAL INFANT

As for liberty in general, this has been withheld from children in the past only by the use of brute force. The child knew, for example, that if it refused to go to bed at an unreasonably early hour it would be carried to bed. If it had been allowed to argue its justice, "Surely Nature is the great guide in these matters. Nature will tell me when it is time to go to bed by inducing symptoms of somnolence. Let us sit up to gether and see who gets tired first." And, if the parent had replied with the usual platitude about children needing more sleep, than their elders the child could have made the unanswerable reply: "If I need sleep so badly why do you keep a nurse to wake me in the morning long before I want to get up?"

There was, it is to be feared, no such attempt at rationalisation in such attempt at rationalisation in Victorian days. The child was then little better than a slave, ordered about as though it had no soul of its own, getting up and going to bed at hours dictated by other people, taking its meals at other people, learning to do sums and other lessons at the dictation of other people—in short, growing up with a cramped and distorted personality, like a plum-tree nailed against a south wall.

This state of affairs might have continued indefinitely if it had not been for a curious thing that happened about the turn of the century. It was about this time that children began to feel the weight of oppression being removed from their shoulders, not as a result of their own persistent demands for liberty, but because their parents suddenly began to demand liberty.

Abraham Lincoln, attacking slavery, once said that you cannot hold a man down in a ditch without staying in the ditch yourself. And Victorian parents, while enslaving their children in the home, had to become slaves of the home in order to do so. In order to compel young Frederick to eat fat at the Sunday dinner-table, the stern Victorian father had to remain at the table watching him doing so. And all the other little tyrannies of life occupied as much of the time of the parents as of the children.

The need of appearing authoritative had yet another unhappy consequence for parents. It compelled them to pretend to be older and wiser than they were in order to impress their children. If the ordinary Victorian child had known how young its father and mother really were, he would never have dreamed of yielding them that unquestioning obedience which was the mark of the age in the nursery.

THIS PARENTAL CRAZE

Gradually however within living memory, parents, forgetting their duty to their children, changed their outlook on life. Instead of pretending to be older and wiser than they were they began to pretend to be younger than they were. Mothers, and even grandmothers, began to look like schoolgirls in the tennis courts. Fathers, who would have looked as old and austere as Moses in any other century, took to prancing through fox-trots in the dancing halls with the agility of undergraduates. Paint, powder, and the motor-car did the rest. We often hear of the craze for pleasure among the modern young. What we should always remember is that the craze for pleasure began among the parents.

History, I am sure, will show that the youth movement in its most frivolous aspects was started by married men and women who were determined to remain young themselves.

A NEW FREE RACE

Bent upon pleasure, the new parents had naturally no time to tyrannise over their children. Fathers, longing to get away for a round of golf, had no time to waste in forcing fat down their sons' reluctant throats. Mothers, hurrying to the tennis court, were only too eager to leave their infant daughters to develop their personalities in peace.

As a result, a race of children has grown up which is the freest that the world has yet seen. Here and there, of course, are a few lingering traces of the old servitude. There are still "problem parents" to be found who, in the spirit of the old dispensation, will forbid their daughter of 17 to smoke cigarettes. I sympathise with the girl. I have tried to give up smoking myself. Not being she, however, I may say that in the circumstances, if I were she, I should give up cigarettes. No one—especially at 17—should miss the opportunity of giving such an example of heroic self-sacrifice.

"So we got to kidding each other, she pretending she'd never even heard of me—"

A DARK GREEN rough faced suit has a putty-colored caracul collar which blends beautifully with the ribbed velvet blouse of the same shade, which is shown at the upper left. Wear a dark green stitched suede belt on the blouse and you have an ensemble which matches and flatters.

BLACK astrakhan trims this luxurious oatmeal-colored rough wool coat, which has corded shoulders to give the effect of width.

THE LADY who goes to dine in this black transparent velvet dinner suit with white flowers on the shoulder is going to walk away with the honors. Jeweled buttons fasten the jacket and its cuffs.

JUST the dress to wear under the oatmeal coat is this black silk crepe one. Mirror glass and silver leaf clips on either shoulder are important trimming touches.

THE new autumn styles are to be essentially feminine. The tailored models, however, are not to disappear entirely but they are to be tailored in such a manner as not to look mannish.

The trick of this so-called feminine vogue is to look trimly tailored and at the same time not to look too severely tailored. This sounds rather difficult but American and French designers have successfully worked out this new idea. Careful shopping is required to find just what is smart and new as well as suitable.

Double-breasted mannish costumes are not to be worn by office girls during the cooler months nor will they be obliged to wear models that trail and swish. If novel stylish, they should choose a tailored costume with novel effects on the shoulders or sleeves.

For the winter months, woollen dresses for the office should be carried out in straight-line silhouettes and tailored collars. These styles achieve the feminine side of the autumn fashions.

The feminine vogue is to be even more popular with evening gowns of the hour-glass-figure variety. These gowns are to be carried out in the newest of materials.

Autumn coats achieve their feminine mode by the use of fur and fitted lines.

Almost all autumn coats are fur trimmed. Sometimes, there is a collar which comes down across the front, ending right at the hem or there is the furless collared coat with fur trimmed cuffs. Fur trimmed cuffs, however, are not quite so popular as the fur trimmed sleeve vogue.

For early winter wear there are more three-piece suits than separate coats. The coat is complete in itself and can be worn with other things besides the skirt and jacket which it matches in fabric and design.

Blouses are also important this autumn. American designers appear to be featuring them to the utmost. They are always handy and add variety to winter ensembles.

The herring season is now engaging the full attention of Yarmouth fishermen, except perhaps, of such weather-beaten old salts as shown above, telling a girl visitor the story of his amazing adventures on the great oceans.

BACK TO COAL Conversion of Two Great Liners

The forthcoming conversion of the two great South Atlantic liners, Asturias and Alcantara, of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, from Diesel engines to steam turbines is of profound significance in the battle that has long been raging between steam and internal combustion for the propulsion of British ships. The conversion is attributable to the great overall cost of the Diesel engine and the vibration and noise to which it gives rise in large passenger ships. The great turbines of these vessels will draw their steam from the very latest type of Johnson water-tube boiler, the space occupied by such boilers being considerably less than that occupied by Diesel engines.

Mr. John Johnson, the Chief Engineer of Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd., and a Member of Council of the Institute of Naval Architects, is, perhaps, the best known of the protagonists of steam propulsion for ships, and, in the majority of cases, of steam derived from British coal. He has expressed the view that, in recent years, the economic value of coal has been obscured by the physical properties and advantages of oil, but technical advances in the art of handling and burning coal have for all practical purposes eliminated the handicaps under which coal has previously laboured, and there is no longer any reason why it should not be used for the propulsion of ships, and considerable economies and advantages secured thereby. This view has been confirmed by Sir John Blyen and other well-known marine engineers and constructors, and, with regard to the Navy, by Sir John Latta and R. R. Admirals H. S. Garwood, C.B. Whether this dramatic change of maritime policy will have further repercussions on the future of marine propulsion remains to be seen.

RACCOON COLONY AT WHIPSNADE

THE PASSION FOR WASHING

On account of the Whipsnade monkeys' almost incredible capacity for destruction, it has been found necessary to fit the famous "Tarzan Tree" with stout ropes reaching from the upper branches to the ground.

This step was taken owing to the more powerful monkeys so "pruning" the giant oak, which had withstood the scales of centuries, as to maroon their weaker brethren in the sleeping boxes half-way up the trunk, besides in some cases cutting off all access to their own quarters.

A part of the lawn near the restaurant has been enclosed for the reception of a raccoon colony. The raccoon, with its slovenly face and ringed tail, will recall to many childhood memories of Uncle Remus; indeed, "Raccoon" is still the hero of plantation legend and folk lore, and to be "cooney" is a popular synonym for cunning and resourcefulness in the Central United States.

The raccoon evinces one most remarkable trait—a passion for washing every article of food before eating it, and this habit involves the present exhibits in constant journeys between their drinking troughs in the middle of their enclosure and the purveyors of "voluntary contributions." A raccoon that lived some years ago in the Rector's Park menagerie washed its newly-born young so frequently that they eventually succumbed to their excessive ablutions.

An interesting addition to the Aquarium is a collection of some remarkable little African perch-like fish known as phantoms. Their popular name is derived from the fact that the female, after having deposited some sixty eggs, takes them into her mouth—to the considerable distortion of her features—and there retains them until they hatch. For some weeks after hatching the young are liable to be edged within the parental mouth cavity upon the slightest hint of danger.

A large number of John Dorys have also been received at the Underwater Zoo, and provide a remarkable spectacle at feeding time. The vent mouths of these fish are of a telescopic nature, and when in the act of catching their prey are shot out with lightning rapidity to a considerable distance.

Let a Man Teach You How to Shop

By PHYLLIS STANFORD.

I would hate to let him know it, but it is from mere man that I have discovered the art of shopping.

Have you ever paid a visit with a man to his tailor? And have you watched furtively from the seat in the corner in which you have been so deferentially ensconced? Because if so, you probably saw the erstwhile head of his school and the autoerotic presumptions of your breakfast table become as clay to the potter—though the potter (of course I mean tailor) suavely permits the positions to appear reversed. Checks and stripes are produced, discussed, chosen or set aside, masterful declarations of choice from the clay are met with masterly mouldings from the potter, or countered by even more masterly inclination.

A man may not choose his suits any more than the leopard his spots.

THEIR LIMITED CHOICE

Men may say they are not the slaves of fashion, but they certainly are slaves under the eye of the tailor.

The same with hats. The jokes about women and new hats are as old and as numerous as those about mothers-in-law and Aberdeen.

Of course men are very limited in their choice, but even so you will agree that the speed with which a man can buy a new hat is as remarkable as his self-control. Callousness, it amounts to, no sign of any interest in the matter, nothing of the pantomime that might be called Woman and the Hat. A very little straightening or pulling, possibly, but hesitation or questioning is concerned with the colour and the size alone.

"I want a soft hat." "Draw, sir? Certainly, sir. Will you take a seat, madam?" Again I watch and marvel. A very short discussion on the size of the head is rather unobtrusive, though at home before we get out it had seemed a matter of some importance and considerable speculation.

The hatter, it seems, had decided everything before we had taken half a dozen steps towards his door, and any show of resistance on our part is met with a chilly courtesy that precludes any possible difference of opinion, and reveals him to me as one more perfect potter.

RECOGNISING THE EXPERT.

Men, you see, recognise the expert. And how right they are. We have been called a nation of shopkeepers, and there must be some amongst us who know our job. After all, we pride ourselves on being able to do our own job, so why not admit that the tailor or the hatter is an expert at his?

I have been experimenting in hairdressers. I said to one, "I think I shall grow my hair."

"Curls would suit you, madam, and look delightful under the new hats. But . . ." and we guessed together and wondered if they would be easy to manage or not.

Subconsciously—it may even have been consciously, but it was pleasantly so—I became clay and she the potter. I thought I decided against curls; but I see now in the light of afterthought that it was the hairdresser who knew that my hair would never take them peacefully and that for me they were not to be.

Well, after all, I don't go to a doctor and detail the treatment I want him to prescribe for me. So now I have decided to take a leaf out of mere man's book and to go shopping by the code therein set for them. I am going to save myself a lot of time and trouble, and I will always have the satisfaction of knowing that, in the eyes of at least one person who knows, my purchases are correct.

I choose my expert—very carefully, of course. I test his ability and then I take it for granted. He rises to occasion nine times out of ten. And the tenth? I try again further down the street.

WILLS FOUND AFTER 200 YEARS

LAW SUITS MAY FOLLOW.

Ninety-eight unopened wills, dating from 1740 to 1760, have been found in the archives of the town of Szekesfehervar.

These wills, which may possibly cause law-suits and the transfer of property, will be officially opened by the Burgomaster and then made public by the tribunal, after which they will be returned to the archives. Apart from their value from an antiquarian point of view, the wills afford an interesting heraldic study, and are expected to throw light on the origin of many old Hungarian families.

A splendid bull, which gained first prize in a recent agricultural exhibition in Munich in connexion with the annual October festivities.

ODDS AND ENDS FROM HERE AND THERE

Perhaps it is the approach of winter; perhaps it is something in the air. Whatever the reason, the fact is that quarrels seem to bulk large in this week-end's batch of strange news from abroad.

Read about the truculent teetotalers, for example:—

"I venture to disagree with you," said a political opponent to the Mayor of Rindia, Latvia, during an argument.

The Mayor promptly hit him on the head with a tea-cup. His opponent retaliated with both cup and saucer, and the Mayor was so badly injured that he had to be removed to hospital.

And here is a quarrel, reported by Renter from Oakland (California) which seems to prove that a thick head is not always a handicap:—

The police produced Bob Dray, a boat title battler at Oakland, to support a charge that he had knocked Emilio Deschell over the head with the weapon.

Hospital attendants, who sent Emilio home, said that his head showed practically no evidence—only a slight scalp wound.

Let us turn from Liverishness to Love, and read about the pallant shoe-maker:—

Four fine, handsome women, themselves, had allowed some, then, the oil and deliberately lashed the flames.

Since raffle has been officially sanctioned in France, a school for couples has been opened in Paris, where the above photo was taken.

MR. PEPYS IN HONGKONG

Oct. 27th. This day, being a Friday, we do make the port of Singapore, being our last port of call before we make our return to Hongkong and do come to our moorings about two of the clock. But before punchon, Mr. Franco and I do make good cheer over a glass of Hollands waters or it may be two, seeing we were so near to our offices. To town later where I do meet an old acquaintance, a Mr. Roger who did serve in a Banque in Hongkong when we both were young men. And both he and his lady do make me good cheer, and after our dinner he taken me to bed and this being so we talk over the old days. To bed in so large a chamber I feel lost after my cabin.

28th. Up very betimes, but Lord! how the rain doth fall, and so in Mr. R's car to his office and later to the shippe, where it made me ready to weep to see the rain fall so no hatches could be opened nor cargo worked. So it be not until four of the clock that we do clear, and do see a hoy of the same Company's fleet, the Somali. And in an hour or so, to my greatest possible disgust, she do pass us so speedily that we scarce do see her stern for spray, and will they say come to port long before us. But why the King's Mails which we do carry be not set on board of her I know not.

29th. Lord's Day. At Sea and fair weather. This day I liny late, trusting that the master should not inspect Cabins the first day out from port. And so it did prove. Later playing at Contract, but Lord! all did run awry and once when showing an ace my partner did leave me in. Lost me ten shillings.

30th. This day up betimes and fall to talking with the men of the Malayan Krickett side, and more especially a Mr. Aren, whom I perceive to be a scion of a most intelligent family and to have been well instructed in his youth at the game. It seems he is the Captain and from what he says I do perceive that he is pretty well at bowling but that as strikers they be somewhat to seek. All day very hot, as indeed it has been these three weeks until at evening a wind blows which we suppose to be the North East Monsoon. Yet at midnight, after a flagon, or two of ale, I do find there is again a following wind.

31st. Lay into. My steward tells me it was indeed the Monsoon but that at nightfall the ships was put about and we did run due south there being a typhoon ahead. 1st. Nov. This day the ships do turn north again and later due East and I know not what we shall do any more than I know what Mr. Franco doth mean when he talks of mulberry bushes and we upon the high seas.

3rd. This day at day break two touch at the port of Hongkong, and for these two days I have been in no case to write in my diary being taken with a Nausea. And so once more I land in the Colony, very joyous to be back in the place but sick at heart that my wife, poor wretch, comes not with me. To the Clubbe with my baggage where I do find I have again my old chamber to my great content. But I am put out to find a scoundrel fellow hath stolen a sack of my gear which I doubt I shall find again. To the office to report where none seems much interested, and later to the bar of the Clubbe where I find many old friends and especially Mr. Pitt more opinionated than ever, which do make me feel that I am at home again. To bed betimes. Lord! how I did sleep.

4th. To my office betimes and there pretty hard at work which indeed seems strange to me. To Kowloon later to see the Navy at Krickett where I meet many old friends, and later with Mr. Frank to the Kowloon Krickett Clubbe, where I drink a flagon or two of this new ale. But I am over fresh from a sea-stomach to pronounce fairly upon the flavour. At night to Sir W. Penn and his lady where I dine on a neatly dressed dinner and afterwards at hazard. Not Mr. Aren and his lady and other friends. And so home very late and to bed.

5th. Lord's Day. This morning I was minded to sleep late but am dragged from my bed by Mr. Franco who puts me in mind that I am to play at Golf with him at Happy Valley. So up, with some discomfort and to the Valley where I strike the ball pretty fair but Lord there are so many crosses I take no pleasure of it. Later I find I do suffer a most sore affliction in my veins so that I am in no case to bend, or being once bent, to stand upright again. To the Clubbe where I find Mr. Pitt and eat my nunchoon with him. Slept and early to bed pretty miserable.

6th. Up very betimes and after breking my fast to the office where I am most busy. But Lord! the rain doth so come down it might be summer and I am in doubt if there can be the playing of Krickett in the morning or no. 7th. At the office and later, all my duties there being discharged, to the Krickett ground and later to my Chamber where I may watch the game from my Verandah while I eat my nunchoon and after. But Lord! so badly do I feel that they all be out before four of the clock and for less than a hundred notches. Yet does Hongkong face little better and is as ill off at the end of the day.

9th. These last days I have been too thronged with business and Krickett to write in my diary and I do make a vow I will amende myself in that way for the future. We do lose the game against Malaya by but fourteen notches, and well as Mr. Aren's men did play I do hold the match should have been won, and that it behoves us to set our house in order.

GALA NIGHT AT THE PENINSULA HOTEL

Brilliant Exhibitions By Dancers

In delightful atmosphere of informal jollity, over 200 patrons of the Peninsula Hotel danced away the closing phases of last night and the early hours of this morning, the occasion being a special Armistice Eve gala.

Considerable credit is due to the management of the Hotel, which, under the personal supervision of Mr. Peovaneli, was responsible for the excellent arrangements which contributed in no small measure to the success of the event.

The entertainment was of the highest order. Two orchestras dispensed a continuous programme of music, and additional attractions were the initial appearance of Escandel and Rosita, the brilliant Spanish dancers, and J. A. Andrew and Ursula Preston, whose ballroom exhibitions were brilliant accomplishments.

POPULARITY ASSURED. Escandel—and Rosita—whose costumes were magnificent, captured the admiration of the audience with two very fine interpretations of Spanish dances. The Hongkong public demonstrated very clearly last night that they are going to like this clever team of dancers.

Mr. Andrew and Miss Preston repeated several of their most popular numbers including the tango, waltz, blues, quick-step, rumba, and the "Crush." The crowd were enraptured, and clamoured for encores.

Unfortunately Hongkong is, for the time being at least, losing these two very accomplished dancers. They make their final appearance at the Peninsula and Hongkong Hotels to-night, and leave for Japan on Tuesday.

During their month here they have provided something quite new in entertainment and have given the local dancing public a fresh idea of the attraction and artistry of English ballroom dancing. They will be very much missed.—S.A.G.

GERMANY STANDS FIRM ON EQUALITY ISSUE

vision in order to give an added sense of security to some other Powers then that supervision was to begin from the start and it was to be general.

Our first proposal was that it should operate when a complaint was made. On second thoughts, we agreed to general supervision.

TYPICAL POINTS.

These were merely typical points and he had indicated the way in which they had been handled. The spirit that had been shown by what he had said, was being applied to all the other points brought up by the deputation. A good many of them were still in the process of negotiation.

The aim before them in those negotiations was to reach an agreement, to get not only disarmament, but peace the spirit which alone is going to supply the foundation for disarmament.

GENERAL APPLICATION.

Sir John Simon, referring to the supervision proposal, recalled his speech at Geneva in which he said it was understood on all hands that the supervision contemplated would be of general application.

One thing to be noted about the first stage of the scheme was that there should be, from the beginning of the convention, an agreement that no Government would manufacture or acquire any further weapons of any of the types to be eventually abolished.

That in itself necessitated the general application of supervision. The whole question of supervision was one of great difficulty but the British Government came to the conclusion that for the sake of providing a general system of effective inspection and thereby tending to re-establish a feeling of confidence they ought not to put obstacles in that way.

It was in the light of that which he regarded as a very great contribution toward a practical agreement that supervision was understood on all hands to be of a general application.

FINANCIAL CONTROL.

Regarding financial control, there were tremendous difficulties. In Britain, the Government could not spend money on arms without the whole thing appearing in the accounts.

But every country did not proceed on that basis and to have an international agreement for budgetary control it was essential to have a system which might be expected to produce the proper results in countries where vastly different systems obtained.

There was a further difficulty, not only of the changing value of money, but of a difference of standards, and there were others which must be borne in mind.

PUBLICITY.

The view the British Government had taken was that they must enquire whether an agreement could be reached on a satisfactory system of budgetary publicity to begin with, and then to enquire whether the measure by which the different nations would make known and open to public inspection what they are doing could be secured.

If this was done, they would, in the course of getting it done, probably find a way of removing many of these difficulties.

The position of the Joint Commission was that provision for a system of budgetary publicity over a period of years should be made in the disarmament convention and that this afforded the best opportunity of judging whether a system of budgetary limitation could not eventually be put into force.—British Wireless.

ARMISTICE DAY

to say the least of it?

REFUSAL TO FORGET.

Again, at the Cenotaph ceremony we shall use a prayer which asks God to deliver us from the temper which refuses to forgive and has no wish to forget. A great deal of the present most disquieting condition of Europe is due to the refusal to forget past injuries, the determination in fact to "remember."

Here is the sinister kind of "remembrance" which keeps alive bitterness and hatred, which perpetually fans suspicion and distrust and by looking for the worst effectively brings it to the surface, there to snarl and strain at any leashes which still may hold it back from another ghastly conflict more terrible than the last.

No, "remembrance" by itself is not good enough. The only justification for it to my mind is that if we rightly remember we will resolve something wholly better for the future; and the emphasis must be on remembering but on resolving.

NEW PUBLIC OPINION.

Thus I feel sure that if this day is to live we must form a new public opinion about it. I wish we could change its name again. In the past we have called this service a "Service of Commemoration" this year I have called it one of "Commemoration and Hope." We want a name for November 11th which will suggest Hope of the right kind, a hope which is dynamic, a hope which is as far as possible from what is ordinarily understood by the term "a pious hope." In the world as it is to-day there is no place for weak sentiments. We are confronted by bitter facts and tightly tangled muddles, and nothing short of the strongest realities will steer the world through them.

GOVERNOR PRESENT.

Among those who attended the service were H. E. the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., and Lady Peel; Lady Dreyer; H. E. the G. O. C., Maj.-Gen. O. C. Borrett, C. B., C. M. G., C. B. E., D. S. O., and Mrs. Borrett; His Honour the Chief Justice, Mr. J. R. Wood; Commodore F. Elliott, O.B.E., R.N., and Mrs. Elliott; the Hon. Mr. D. W. Trautman, C. M. G., the Hon. Mr. C. G. Alabaster, K. C., O. B. E., and Mrs. Alabaster; the Hon. Mr. A. G. W. Tickle, the Hon. Sir H. E. Pollock, K. C., the Hon. Mr. C. G. S. Mackie, the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall, C. M. G.; the Hon. Mr. E. D. C. Wolfe, C. M. G.; the Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau and Dr. S. W. Tso.

The clergy attended, or who assisted at the service included the Revs. W. W. Rogers, N. Evans, J. N. Lewis Bryan, S. C. F., F. N. Chamberlain, R. N., R. R. Evans, R. N.; F. M. Dodwell, R. N.; J. L. Laro, C. F., P. S. F. Tso, K. Y. Lee, W. S. Tsan, Dr. E. L. Allen, and E. C. H. Tribbeck.

ATHLETIC CEREMONY.

A Commemoration service was also held at St. Joseph's Church, attended by the Catholic community, including schoolchildren, Boy Scouts and Girl Guides.

The officiating priest was Fr. O'Carroll, R. C. Chaplain to the Forces, who also preached the occasional sermon.

He spoke of the doctrine of Purgatory, and asked the congregation to join in a special effort on Armistice Day by prayers for those who had given their lives in the War.

The Requiem Mass was supplemented by special music and a mixed choir.

Monsieur Valtorta, Vicar Apostolic for Hongkong, was amongst the large congregation present.

A MUCH BETTER TEAM

COLONY XI TO MEET SHANGHAI

ATTACK GREATLY IMPROVED

DUCKITT LOSES HIS PLACE

PEREIRA & BECK SELECTED

(By "Veritas").

PEREIRA.

The inclusion of F. Pereira, A. W. Hayward, E. F. Fincher and A. C. Beck to the exclusion of A. C. Hamilton, F. Goodwin, E. R. Duckitt and T. M. Redmond are the features of the composition of the Hongkong Interport cricket team to oppose Shanghai in the second match of the series which starts at the H.K.C.C., this morning.

The selection of E. R. Duckitt as 12th man comes as a profound shock in view of his excellent bowling and fielding against Malaya.

Otherwise the alterations can be regarded as eminently satisfactory.

Somebody, of course, had to come in for Frank Goodwin, who is kept out of the team solely on account of injury.

The selectors apparently decided to endeavour to stiffen both batting and bowling. With this in mind Hayward and E. F. Fincher as batsmen have been included, and Pereira and Beck as bowlers.

A PURE GAMBLE. Beck, of course, is a pure gamble. Apart from the doubtful deeds he performed at Home this summer, there is not the slightest inkling as to his form. On top of which one is forced ruefully to recollect that he has been off the cricket field for at least five weeks, and in fact only stepped off a boat a week ago.

In nominating Pereira, the selection committee have, I am sure, acted wisely. Where, perhaps, they could have used a little more wisdom was in nominating Pereira yesterday afternoon of the possibility of his selection and thus giving him the chance of loosening up at the nets.

"Tam" Pearce had some net practice yesterday afternoon which led many people to think that he would be selected.

WHAT SAVED GARTHWAITE. That Garthwaite has been persisted in, in view of his comparative failure against Malaya, is, I am confident, due entirely to his bowling display yesterday. His 5 for 32 against the Southerners could not be ignored, especially in view of the fact that it was accomplished on a batsman's wicket. It was not expected that either Redmond or Hamilton would retain their places. It is, of course, quite possible that if they had been selected they would come off in this match, but their display against Malaya did not warrant such a gamble, especially as there were several other very eligible players from whom to choose.

On the whole I think this team can be regarded as being slightly stronger. A fast bowler at each end must afford Hongkong a better chance of winning. And it must also be borne in mind that Pereira is a likely run-getter—in fact a very useful man to have in any team.

MORE BACKBONE. But in any case Hongkong's batting promises to be somewhat stronger. Ernie Fincher is one of the best bats in the Colony and a felder who can save an equal number of runs, whilst Hayward, although far from producing his best form so far this season, is a potential scorer, and can be looked to, to provide that backbone so badly needed during the first part of the week.

What it amounts to is that Hongkong have two fast opening bowlers and four reliable change-trundlers, whilst their batting goes from strength to reliability from No. 1 down to No. 8.

The selected team is:
H. Owen Hughes (Captain)
A. W. Hayward
E. C. Fincher
T. A. Pearce
F. F. Fincher
P. V. Williams
C. C. Garthwaite
F. Pereira
A. R. Minu
A. S. Dunkley
A. C. Beck
E. R. Duckitt, 12th Man.

WEEK-END FOOTBALL ATTRACTIONS

TO-DAY'S CHARITY GAME AT SOOKUNPOO

"REST" & COMBINED SERVICES STRONGLY REPRESENTED

ATHLETIC AND LINCOLNS CLASH

TO-MORROW'S BIG MATCH ON THE CLUB GROUND

(By "Veritas")

Once again the Armistice Day football match, which has become just as much an institution as the Lai Wah, Charity Cup and Shield contests, is with us, and this afternoon representative teams of the Football Association and the Combined Services will do battle before what is hoped will be a record crowd.

At the time of writing, conditions promise to be ideal, and with the weather as it is, the whole of Hongkong soccer fraternity should turn out for this match, the only one of the afternoon in which senior-players are concerned.

Two excellent teams are being fielded, and the result is just about as open a proposition as one could wish for.

On paper the Services eleven appears as being slightly the stronger, but I shouldn't be surprised to find it remains purely paper superiority.

The Services may have a slight pull in defence, though with Hill now at the top of his form, and Wong Wing a very able goalkeeper, it is just a toss up whether they will find any more difficulty in holding Langmead and Co., as Heath, Allen and Morrison will experience against Howe and his colleagues.

Unless Snooks shows a big improvement on last week's display, Syd. Strange should have no anxiety, especially as he is being covered by Bliss.

WILL CHEN PLAY?

The "Rest" is by no means the strongest that could be fielded, but it is fairly representative, with three players each from the Club, Kowloon and South China and one each from the Police and Athletic.

The Services eleven includes four Navy players, the only likely weakness among whom is McGuire, whose form this season has not been consistent.

The attacking quintette makes a formidable looking line-up, with Smith, Langmead and Ridley as the inside trio.

Somewhat adroitly Leung Wing-chui has been sent to right half, where, with Hill behind, he is expected to break up the Ridley-Hoquaard combination.

On the other hand the "Rest" forward line is not to be lightly regarded. It spells goals galore. Howe and Strange should be able to work together with some understanding, and Tam Kong-pak can always count on himself, so that with Tang Kwong-sum, the right wing is quite solid and reliable.

REPRESENTATIVE.

Quite a lot of interest will centre on Blake, Kowloon's school-boy right winger, who makes his debut in representative football.

Blake has been playing extremely good football this season, and although his selection may cause some surprise, there is plenty of justification for his appearance in them.

Quite a full programme is scheduled for this afternoon in the Second and Third Divisions. Navy, Borderers and South China appear fairly safe to win in Division 2.

The Club may catch the Navy off their balance and create an upset, but one cannot be too sanguine concerning this, as the Civilian have displayed very variable form this year.

The big league match of the week-end is on the Club ground to-morrow, when the Athletic entertain the Lincolns.

BLAKE'S DEBUT.

So often this year have we been told that "Darkie" Chen, the Shanghai Interporter, will appear in the Athletic colours, and just as often has he failed to do so, that one hesitates to accept the suggestion that he will turn out against the Lincolns.

None the less, the Athletic are looking forward to his services to-morrow, which will mean that the Lincolns will have extra cause to watch their step.

The Athletic have been the big disappointment of the season so far. Full of promise, with eleven players of high calibre, they have continually flattered, only to deceive.

When things are going their way, they can be as lively and entertaining a combination as any in local football, but a tendency to get their tails down has been very pronounced.

The real weakness lies in the defence, which is often faulty in positioning and constantly liable to crack under strain.

RIDLEY THE MAIN SPRING.

This was particularly emphasised in the Governor's Cup match, and if Ridley can repeat to-morrow what he did then, the Athletic are doomed to concede a couple of points.

Nowadays one has come to look upon the necessity of Ridley to the Lincolns forward line as one does the main spring to a watch. Assuredly a continuance of his current form will put him into any representative team in Hongkong.

Podmore, the Clever Borderers' centre half, who is a notable absentee from the Combined Services team this afternoon. The pivotal position is being filled by Cork of the Lincolns.

I think the Lincolns will win to-morrow because they have revealed themselves to be a better balanced and less temperamental team than the Athletic.

Quite a lot, however, depends on whether "Darkie" Chen makes his debut with the Chinese.

South China's visit to King's Park is a cinch for the champions. I don't think there is the slightest chance of them making the same mistake as last year, and therefore consideration of their defeat is out of the question.

TOO BAD!

The enforced withdrawal of the East Lancashire teams from the Second and Third Divisions is most unfortunate. The only consolation is that the first string have decided to carry on, so that we may yet see new and serious contenders for the league honours now held by South China.

There is no need to labour the point, but it is not difficult to appreciate the reasons which actuated the decision of the East Lancs to withdraw from the junior divisions. Isolated as they are at Fanning, the expense and trouble of getting three teams into Hongkong every week makes league football for the regiment an impracticable proposition.

Nevertheless we all regret the necessity for such a decision, for new blood in all forms of sport is always welcome, and I am sure that had they been in the position the East Lancs would have proved themselves worthy of any team in the second and third divisions.

YESTERDAY AND TO-DAY

INTERPORT CRICKET REVIEWED

PEN PICTURES OF SHANGHAI TEAM

CHANGES IN THE LOCAL XI

WHY ISN'T DUCKITT PLAYING?

(By R. ABBIT.)

I have a good deal to write about in this article and it is rather split up into bits and pieces—part about the Service Match, part about our friends the enemy from Shanghai, and part about our new team.

But there is one point which I should like to make first. I owe an explanation—or perhaps an apology—to T. A. Pearce, as I criticised the shot to which he was out as an attempt to cut the ball. It looked like it to me, but I only printed the statement when I found my view was held by a much better cricketer than myself. I now find, on the evidence of the man who really could see—and I do not mean the batsman though he of course could—that I was quite wrong.

PERFECTLY GOOD STROKE.

The stroke played was a perfectly correct one save that the ball was coming off the pitch with a shade of extra pace.

But for this the ball would have been played in the middle of the bat to a defensive back shot. As it was, the bat was a shade late moving into the line of the ball and so just touched it.

I mention this as I suggested that there was an error in the shot played rather than in the timing of the correct shot to a particularly good ball. The honours go to the bowler.

THE SERVICES MATCH.

I saw little of this, unfortunately, but from the authority of an excellent cricketer I learn that the U.S. captain put Malaya in. The early fall of wickets seemed to justify his action but an excellent stand by Alvis and Gill turned the game round. Between them they put up seventy three runs, and extras accounted for twenty nine of the balance in a total of a hundred and sixty-eight.

When the services batted however, they found Gill and Jonkians at the top of their form and the only redeeming feature of a bad score was a useful innings by Sub-Lieut. Alexander Sinclair. The services followed on, and, if the cricket was not very serious it was most enjoyable.

THE HONGKONG SIDE AGAINST SHANGHAI.

Local cricketers will have been most interested in the publication of the side to meet Shanghai to-day. To a certain extent it surprised me, though several of the changes had been anticipated in my notes of yesterday's date. No less than four changes have been made. Goodwin and Archie Hamilton are, I learn, both dropped as unfit. Redmond and Duckitt also go out. As I supposed Beck comes in for Goodwin and A. W. Hayward, E. F. Fincher and Pereira come in also.

There can be little, if any, criticism of the selection of players in place of Hamilton—if unfit—and Redmond. But as regards Duckitt it is rather a different question.

If, as I have heard, Duckitt did not want to play, then there is nothing more to be said. If he was arbitrarily dropped, I have only to say that it seems a bit hard that a man who has come off as a change bowler and has fielded well should be dropped because he has completely failed with the bat in one match.

This criticism is only based on the assumption that he did not express a wish to retire and, unless anyone definitely knows to the contrary, no criticism at all can stand.

THE NEW TEAM.

The only inclusion that surprised me was Pereira, and this simply on the hear-say evidence that he has not been bowling well this year—of which I have no

THE SHANGHAI TEAM.

RAWSTHORNE AND SMITH NOT PLAYING.

Donald Leach, Shanghai captain, this morning announced that his team would be:

D.W. Leach
R. Booth
J.A. Isaacs
J.C. Jenkins
P. Madar
T.A. Madar
J.F.N. Mayhew
P.V. Simpson
L.F. Stokes
A.C. Sinclair

personal knowledge. He is a magnificent field and a dangerous bat—unless he tries to play the goose game—and is one of my original selections on a hard wicket, which seems almost certain.

We have thus added to the side two good fast bowlers, a dangerous hitter, a bat who can do quite well, while the fielding of the side is not impaired.

Ernie Fincher is well up to, or above the fielding standard, and I do not wish to be unkind when I say that I am only afraid his batting is of the standard of which we have so much—excellent, but apt to crack in an emergency.

No one will be more pleased than myself when he proves me a liar and the drinks will be on me.

A. W. Hayward is just the bat we want, experienced and of a thoroughly sound method. If he can hold his own in the field—and a few years ago he was the best mid-off in the Far East—he will strengthen the side enormously. I am full of hope for the Shanghai match, and my hopes are very definitely strengthened by the excellent display of captaincy which Owen Hughes gave in the Malayan match.

THE SHANGHAI SIDE.

I learn from authoritative circles that Rawsthorne and H. T. Smith will stand down to-day's match. We know most of the side but for the benefit of those of my readers who do not will tabulate the players.

D. W. Leach. Probably the best all-rounder in the Far East. A fine bat and field, he is a dangerous bowler who can almost always be relied upon to break up a stand. A magnificent captain and an excellent sportsman whom we are all delighted to see again.

T. R. W. Wilson—vice Captain—a fast out-swinging with the new ball especially against a "third-man wind." Not so dangerous if he does not fit an early wicket. Hits like a kicking horse.

J. A. Isaacs. So does Sam, but defeats the field because you never know where the kicks are going. Really a left hand bowler with a leg-trap and very dangerous on a crumpling pitch.

R. Booth. A most useful off-spin bowler and a sound—if our batsman. More dangerous on a wet wicket than a true fast one. A good field.

J. C. Jenkins is new to me. I am told he is an excellent off-spinner, and a useful bat and field.

Pat Madar is nearly as good with the bat as with the piano. His bowling (slow) is so easy that he gets an awful lot of wickets. Is—or was—a brilliant field.

T. A. Madar. His brother and has the family batting. A good field.

P. V. Simpson we all know. A very useful left hand bat and a good field.

A. C. Sinclair, is, I believe, a newcomer. He hits hard and is a good field.

L. F. Stokes is another old friend. A brilliant cover and a beautiful bat who has always had bad luck down here. He should wear thinner trousers or hit the leg balls with his bat. He tells me his bowling has at last been recognised and he is now eighth change.

J. F. N. Mayhew. A new-comer and a useful bat. As he was good enough to keep for Oxford, I imagine Shanghai will have no trouble behind the sticks.

T. L. Rawsthorne is a sound all-rounder who has the bad luck not to come off very often in "big" games. H. T. Smith is some umpire, see they!

To judge whisky, pour out a small measure of it and add an equal quantity of water. Roll it round in the glass and "nose" it for bouquet. Then sip it, rolling it on the tongue and against the palate. Finally swallow. If it seems in every way the equivalent of a fine liqueur it is "White Horse."

INDIAN PRINCES AND FEDERATION

ALLOCATION OF SEATS

GOVERNMENT DRAFT SCHEME

The Government of India have prepared a detailed scheme of allocation of seats for the Princes in the Upper and Lower House of the proposed Federation.

This scheme, which has been circulated to the Indian Princes for their acceptance, will now be forwarded by the Government of India to His Majesty's Government, who will place it before the Joint Select Committee examining the White Paper, for final acceptance.

The Government of India's scheme is based on the provisions noted in Paragraphs 17 and 18 of the White Paper that in the Upper and Lower Houses the Indian Princes are to get 100 and 125 seats out of 260 and 375 respectively.

REGIONAL BASIS.

It is stated that in finally working out their scheme of allocation the Government of India have taken into consideration various schemes submitted to them from time to time by several Rulers. It is also stated that the Government of India have examined the case of each State individually with the greatest care.

The principles which have guided the Government of India in framing the scheme of allocation are those mentioned by the Viceroy to the Princes in Delhi in March last. It appears, however, that the main principle, namely, on the rank of the States, as already determined by the system of gun-salutes, has been modified in certain cases where exceptional circumstances seem to justify such an action.

The scheme of allocation for the Lower House is based on the population basis.

The Government of India are also guided by the fact that the distribution of seats in both Houses should be based on a regional basis.

PRINCIPAL DETAILS.

It is understood that the Government of India have informed the Princes that their Scheme will be the last word on the subject, unless, of course, all the Princes are able to prepare an agreed alternative scheme.

The principal details of the Scheme are as follows:

PRINCES DISTURBED.

It has to be pointed out that the Scheme explained above has greatly disturbed the Princes. Most of them are dissatisfied with the distribution of seats, and, it is understood, the Standing Committee of the Chamber of Princes is opposed to the distribution.

Now that the scheme of allocation will come before the Joint Select Committee, it is obviously desirable that the Select Committee should hear the views of the Princes, who, surprising to relate, has not so far been invited by the Committee for evidence.

CRUSHED DEAD BY CARS

But Still Standing

Fayette City, Pennsylvania, David A. Davis, 66, was found crushed to death but still standing, on the Belle Vernon Road here. Police said they believed that two cars must have hit him. A passer-by, who found the body, said that when he came upon it, it was standing in the road, perfectly balanced on its feet, but bent so that the head was touching the ground. Deceased's relatives said they had intended taking him to the insane asylum the very day of the accident.—Reuter.

LONDON'S FOREIGN COMMUNITIES

SLOWLY DYING OUT

Foreign communities in London are slowly dying out, and the city steadily losing its cosmopolitan character.

The cause of the decrease is the increasingly strict enforcement of the Aliens Restriction (Amendment) Act of 1919, under which no foreigner is allowed to land without satisfying certain very stringent conditions.

"Before the war there was scarcely any restriction on the number of foreigners allowed to land and take up residence in England," said an official at the Home Office, "and thousands used to arrive every year. Now the number has been reduced to a mere trickle, insufficient in many cases to keep pace with the number of deaths."

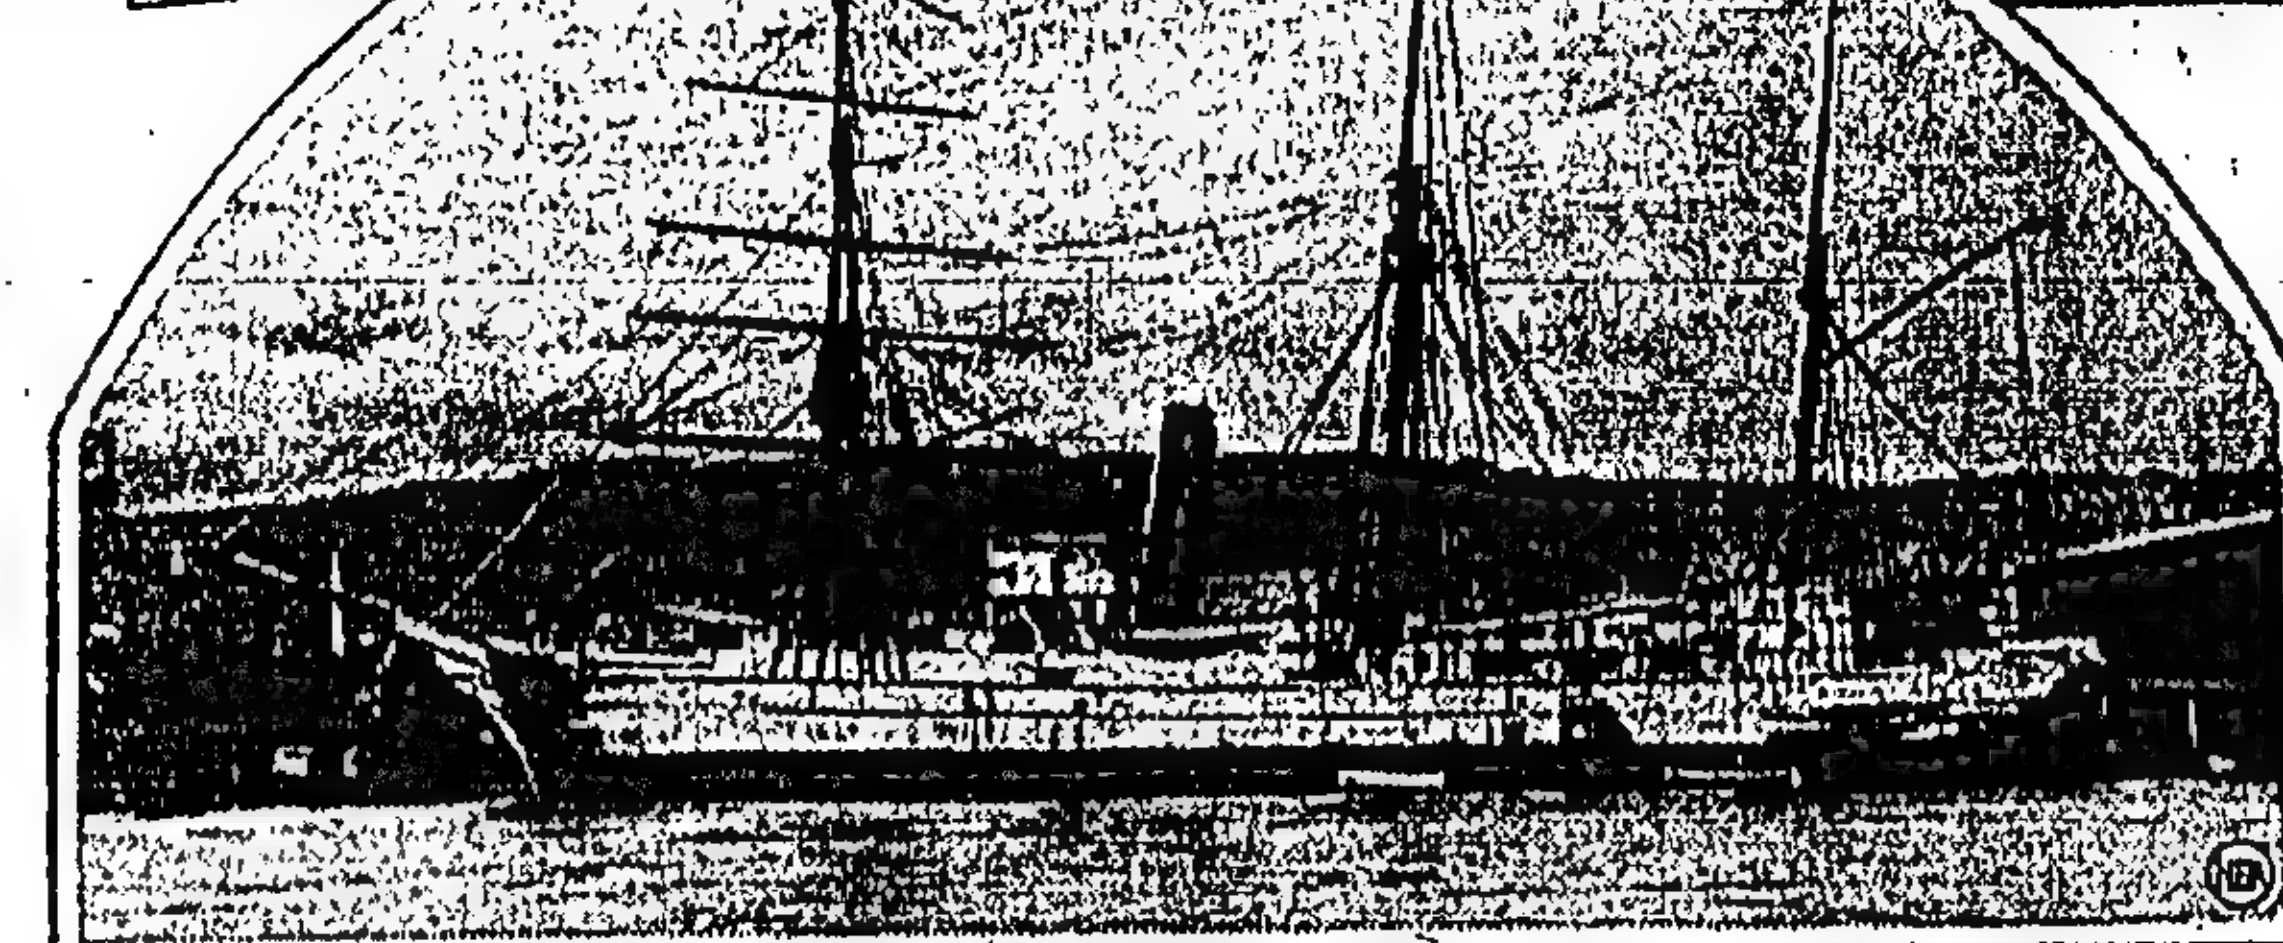

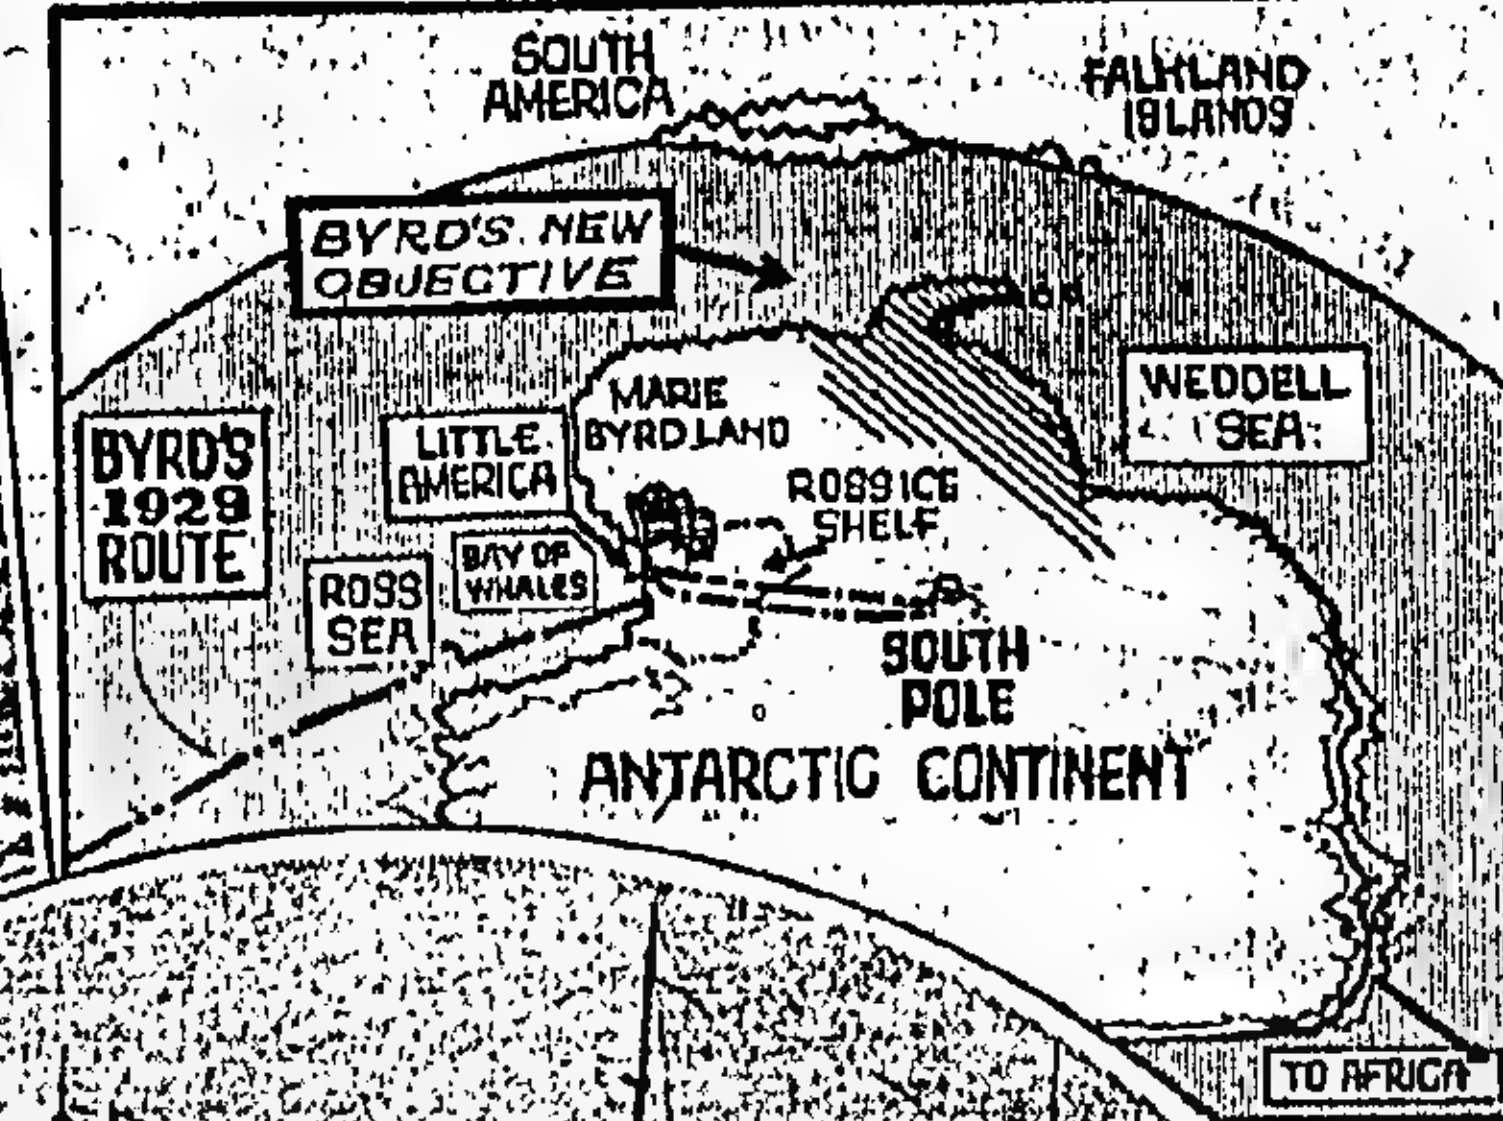

"In very many cases foreigners have married English wives, and consequently their children, British subjects by birth, are also half English by blood. Since there are now very few fresh immigrants to remind them of their native land, they are becoming more English than the English themselves."

"Permits to alien employees are only issued for a year at a time, and at least 90 per cent. of foreign employees leave within the first year. None of them is allowed to set up business in this country unless we are definitely satisfied that their arrival will lead to the employment of British workmen."

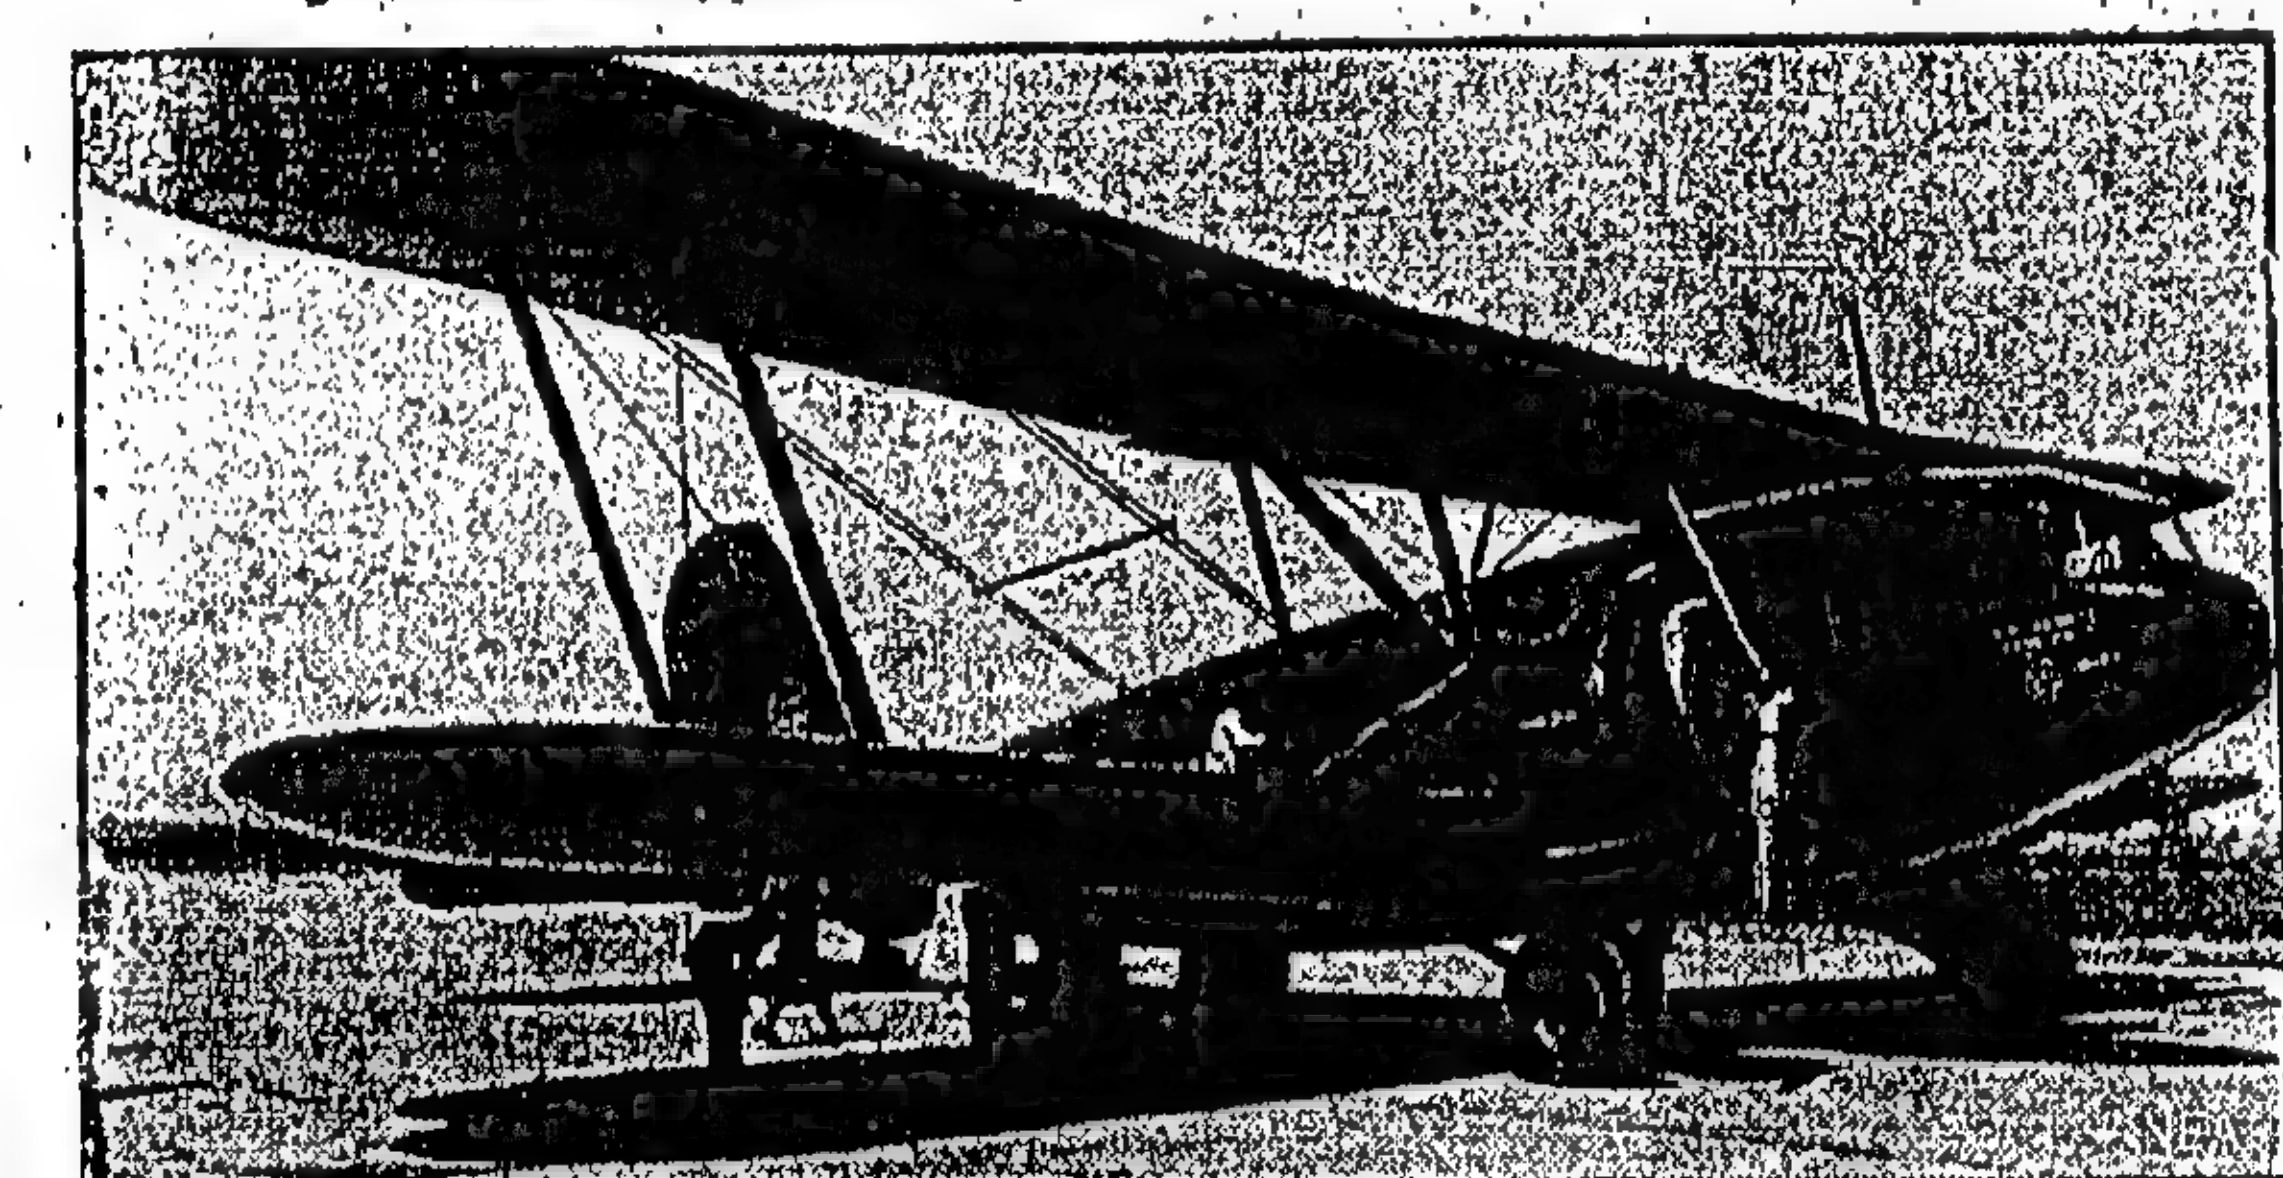

"Consequently, the number of small shops and businesses kept by foreigners is slowly decreasing, although it will be a long time yet before they are finally absorbed."

Aliens are most common in the inner boroughs of Holborn, St. Pancras, Finsbury, Shoreditch, Bethnal Green, Bermondsey, Southwark, and Westminster. The population of those boroughs declined by 83,726 during the ten years 1921-1931.

Byrd Hopes to Find New Antarctic Lands for U. S.

Admiral Richard E. Byrd, above, hopes to discover and claim for the United States vast areas of unexplored land lying between South America and the South Pole on a second expedition he will lead to the Antarctic this winter. The approximate location of land Byrd hopes to find and the route of his 1929 expedition are shown on the map. One of the expedition's two vessels will be the old U. S. coast guard cutter Bear, pictured here, famous for its rescue work in Arctic waters.

Here is the giant Curtiss-Condor plane in which Admiral Byrd will make flights over unexplored regions in the Antarctic on his newest expedition.

SEX DETERMINED BY STARVATION

INSECT RESEARCH DISCOVERY

New knowledge, which it is believed may alter existing ideas as to the possibility of sex determination, has been obtained from the study of insect populations.

It has been discovered that the sex ratio of insects can be markedly influenced by the partial starvation of the larvae. One day's starvation increases the proportion of males, while two or three days' starvation increase the proportion of females.

These conclusions have been independently reached by workers in Australia and at the entomological laboratories at Slough of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, London.

The importance of the results, Professor J. W. Munro, of the Imperial College, explained, was that they provided clear proof that in at any rate one form of life sex could be influenced by outside factors; and, more especially, that this could be done after fertilization had taken place.

The insect chiefly used in the research was the so-called flour beetle.

But it could be stated with confidence, Professor Munro explained, that at least some other insects were affected in the same way.

The extent to which the sex ratio has been altered in the Australian experiments is as follows: Normal proportion of males, 51.6 per cent.; males after one day's starvation, 56.8 per cent.; males after two days' starvation 46.4 per cent.

Research has confirmed the finding of professor Poulton at Oxford some years ago that selected male larvae of a butterfly which had been sent by post arrived in some cases as females, a result which was received at the time with some scepticism.

"Suppose for a moment," Professor Munro stated, "that these results are applicable to human beings, it would then be possible that the preponderance of male births during the war was due to the food shortage. Equally, modern slimming by women might make its effect felt. Admittedly these are speculations, but in the present state of knowledge we ought not to close our minds to anything."

'BLUEBEARD' SHOT AT DAWN

SEATED WITH BACK TO FIRING SQUAD

Rome, Oct. 13.

Italy's "Bluebeard"—Cesare Servigi—was publicly executed this morning by being shot in the back in the presence of over 5,000 people at the rifle range of Poligono, near Spezia.

Public feeling ran so high that it was feared that he might be lynched, and a battalion of carabinieri protected him on his journey in a horse-drawn tumbrel from Spezia prison to the place of execution, nearly two miles away.

Servigi's career of defrauding, murdering, and cutting-up women was revealed four months ago with the discovery of two suitcases containing the remains of one of his victims. He admitted another two murders, and several other crimes of the kind were attributed to him.

The trial ended last night at Spezia when he was found guilty and condemned to death. An appeal for Royal clemency was rejected, and he was shot at dawn this morning.

As the light began to break over the sea he was taken from the tumbrel, blindfolded and bound astride a chair with his back to the firing squad.

Quick! Stop That COLD!

Don't Let It Run Beyond
the First Stage!

A cold ordinarily goes through three stages: the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. To let a cold run beyond the first stage is inviting danger.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine taken at the first sign of a cold will usually stop it in one day. This famous tablet is effective because it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, kills the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and tones the entire system. Anything less than that is toying with a cold. Get Grove's Laxative BROMO QUININE to-day and accept nothing else. Handy, cellophane-wrapped box at every chemist.

will not go under without a fight. The R.A.S.C. and Police have already met once this year when the Police won by three clear goals. It would not surprise me to see the soldiers turn the tables on Wednesday.

A NOTHER closely contested game should be that between the C.B.A. and the Incognitos with the odds slightly in favour of the C.B.A. A draw resulted when the teams met in October but the C.B.A. were then without the services of Johnson and Pole who were included in the Borderers side against the Y.M. on the same day. If they are chosen to play in Thursday's match the C.B.A. have a good chance of winning. The pick of the games for Friday is the Borderers versus the Jats. The Jats are the better side and the fact that they are playing on sand gives them a further advantage.

OF the two Mamak tournament games would give a draw for the meet between the Medical Corps and the United and at least a four goal margin to the Radio against the Anti-Aircraft Battery.

I AM sure I am voicing the wishes of all hockey enthusiasts when I extend to Mrs. L. Goldman (nee Miss B. Laing) congratulations on the happy event of this week. Mrs. Goldman is a member of the Hongkong Ladies Hockey Club and is included in the 1st XI at left inner.

DURING the past week Mr. E. W. Hamilton, President, and Mr. E. J. R. Mitchell, Vice-President of the Hongkong Hockey Association have returned to the Colony from Leave.

S. MacNider, who recently went to Hospital suffering from a fracture to the jaw is progressing satisfactorily. He left hospital on Tuesday but will be unable to take an active part in hockey for some weeks.

EXCELLENT progress is being made in the Mamak tournament. Already, within six weeks of the commencement of the season, fourteen games have been played out of the total of 91. The C.B.A. head the League table with a hundred per cent. record for three matches. The Radio are a close second also with the maximum number of points, but they have one game in hand. They hold the palm for the highest score, having netted ten without reply against the Mule Corps. Other teams who have yet to lose a game are St. Andrew's, the United Hockey Club and the Police.

THERE is an attractive list of fixtures for the coming week especially those billed for Wednesday. Four games are to take place, namely the H.K. Club v H.M.S. Suffolk, South Wales Borderers v Recreio, Y.M.C.A. v Radio, and the R.A.S.C. v the Police. The first mentioned will take place on the Naval ground at King's Park and will be keenly contested. If the Club can get their forward line up to scratch and combine well they should pull off a win. I have not seen the Suffolk play this year and it is therefore difficult to forecast any result with accuracy.

A NOTHER game in which honours should be easy is that between the Borderers and the Recreio at King's Park. The Radio should secure a fairly comfortable win against the Y.M.C.A. The latter have opened badly and are much below their standard of last year. They showed improvement in their last two games and

THREE IN A RACE.

It is a matter for regret that the expected presence of the Derby winner, Trentbridge, in the Hongkong Grifflins Cup at the Thirteenth Extra Meeting of the Hongkong Jockey Club, next Saturday, has apparently been scuttled away many of the best grifflins, which certainly stand good chances of securing the second and third prizes. CHINA'S POLICY
AND JAPAN.MAINTENANCE OF SOVEREIGNTY.

Nanking, Nov. 10. At the meeting of the Political Council yesterday, it was unanimously decided that China, in her negotiations with Japan, should at all events maintain her sovereignty, her rights and her interests.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei has since communicated with Huang Fu at Peking, instructing him to stop all negotiations with the Japanese until further notice.

Great consternation was caused when the terms from the Japanese were made known. The terms were considered as being most unfavourable to China.

Amongst other things, the Japanese demand that the development of the Luanchow mines, the construction of the Peking-Suiyuan Railway and of the Peking-Jehol Railway, and the organization of shipping services between Tientsin, Tsing Huang Tao, and Darien should be undertaken by the Japanese and the Chinese combined.

Prior to the meeting, Mr. Wang Ching-wei had in his private residence a prolonged conversation with Messrs. Ku Mong-yu, Tseng Chung-ming, Chen Kung-po, and Tang Yu-yin. Connections of the Foreign Ministry have emphatically denied the report that Marshal Chiang Kai-shek had telegraphed to the Nanking Government expressing his opinion regarding the Sino-Japanese question—Wah Kiu Yat Po.

Japan's Delegates Leave. Peking, Nov. 10. After spending a few days here, General Okamura, vice-Chief of Staff of the Kwantung Headquarters, proceeded to Tientsin by a special train this morning. He was accompanied by Colonel Shibayama, military attaché of the Japanese Legation, and Mr. Yintung, formerly member of the Retrocession Commission of the war zone.

Scanty official news is available in the faces of various rumours in regard to the real nature and results of General Okamura's negotiations with the Chinese authorities here. At his departure, General Okamura said that an agreement had been reached in principle on problems of a local nature—Central News Agency.

Today's Contract Problem

How should the bidding go in the following hand? If North gets the contract at three no trump and East opens the king of hearts, how should the hand be played from there?

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

Mathematics has a big part in the play of a hand. But I am not inclined to favour it except when there is no better way to arrive at my deductions. The bidding or the drop of the cards can be counted on far better than can mathematics.

The trouble with mathematics is that, while you may win on a certain play 60 per cent of the time, you do not know whether you hold one of the 60 per cent or one of the 40 per cent hands, and you try to gamble with the result that you lose in the majority of times.

To-day's hand is a good example, however of the value of mathematics in contract.

J. A. Waldman of Cincinnati, who was playing this hand, now was confronted with the following problem.

It is true that in this hand you can see that if he lays the ace of spades right down, the king will fall and the declarer will lose only one spade trick. But I want you to take the K, J, 10 and 4 of spades and divide them between the East and West hands in different combinations, and you will be surprised to learn that the only time you will lose your game is when there are three spades to the king in the East hand.

Therefore, the finesse would do Mr. Waldman no good. If he finds three spades in the West hand—whether the king is in the West hand or not—he still need not lose his game. In such event, a finesse might produce five-odd, but first of all he must make game.

Therefore, his correct play with this combination of cards, when he wishes to lose only one spade trick, is to lead the ace. Then, if the king does not fall, he could go over to the dummy, lead a small spade and, if West follows, put on the queen.

If you will shift these four trump around you will find it an interesting study in mathematical distribution.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"I would rather have an audience than a no then yawn."

After more than eight years of villainy Ricardo Cortez has decided that the life of a bad man on the screen isn't as "bad" as might be supposed. He has broken up thousands of picture homes, fired many rounds of ammunition in gang battles and watched the heroine through hundreds of dramas, but he still thinks the "villain" has a decided audience advantage.

"The heavy" in a picture has practically every dramatic situation handed to him by his part in the action," says Cortez who portrays a gangster in "Midnight Mary," a thrilling crook drama, showing at the Queen's. "After the romantic interest has been built up through many reels, a strong climax will occur with the villain directly involved."

In return for this concentration of attention the "bad man" of a picture helps to strengthen the romantic tension by his villainy. And while being a menace the "heavy" is better as he gets worse. I don't believe there is another job in the world where you win every time you lose!

"Paddy, The Next Best Thing"

Janet Gaynor gives her best performance in "Paddy, The Next Best Thing," with Warner Baxter, now at the King's Theatre.

With all the charm that has characterized her performances, ever since her successful and never-to-be-forgotten role in "Seventh Heaven," Miss Gaynor grows increasingly charming with the advent of every new film. In "Paddy," her whimsical brand of humour stands out against the stalwart romantic qualities of Mr. Baxter who, increasingly popular in this type of role, is the rich man so enamoured with the hoyden in Janet Gaynor that he wins her in spite of it.

"Paddy" is gorgeous in its pictorial scope, laid against the background of an Irish coastal town where a once influential family is reduced to circumstances that Paddy tries to improve. Fearlessly she goes into the market place to dispose of her father's chattels so that the family may exist.

Margaret Lindsay, who will be remembered as the girl in the Titanic sequences of "Cavalcade," has the secondary lead in the production and acquits herself very well. Walter Connolly, famous stage actor, performs with his usual aptitude in the role of Janet's calling father. And the other members of the cast, including a brood of Irish pigs, do nobly.

"Summer Lightning"

In "Summer Lightning" the new British and Dominion films at the Central Theatre to-day, there is a boy who at the age of three and a half conducted an orchestra at Hastings before an audience of 3,000 people that included the Prince of Wales.

John Singer is the boy's name; and if over a child prodigy's name is worth remembering for the future, given John's fall in this category. He is only nine now, but has already had an amazing career in the entertainment world.

Since his debut at Hastings before the Prince he has appeared regularly in public and is now a seasoned performer. He has numerous successes to his credit in concert work and cabaret, having been featured in the latter connection at many of London's leading hotels. Young Singer has an excellent singing voice and is highly capable mimic. In addition, he is a step-dancer of a considerable ability, having been trained for a period of years at the Terry School. Among many outstanding engagements in which he has been seen to great advantage was one at the popular Commodore Cinema, Hammer Smith.

John made his screen debut at the age of seven and since has appeared in 17 films, among his more recent pictures being "King of the Ritz" with Stanley Lupino, and "Crime at Blossoms," a Paramount-British production directed by Mackenzie Rogers B. and D's contract director, who was seen in charge of "Summer Lightning."

"The Shadow"

Henry Kendall, who stars in "The Shadow" is one of the most versatile of all the film stars, and is equally at home in comedy or drama. He is probably most appreciated in "silly ass" roles, as he is an adept in this type of humour, and really good "silly ass" comedians are few and far between. But Henry is also delightful in the type of part he played in "Bill the Conqueror"—a young English farmer, devoted to the soil.

HITLER'S TRIUMPH

ESCAPE FROM ENEMIES CELEBRATED

Munich, Nov. 10.

The tenth anniversary of Hitler's famous beer cellar "putsch"—his first attempt to make Germany a Nazi State is being celebrated here.

Ten years ago, Hitler, then Germany's Robin Hood, with a handful of picked men, was ambushed at the Odeons Platz by Bavarian State Police.

Sixteen of his men were killed, and Capt. Goering and himself were wounded.

Munich to-day resounds to the marching feet of triumphant Nazis.

The streets will be bedecked with Nazi emblems when Hitler heads the heroes of 1923 over the same historical route up to the Odeons Platz, where he will be greeted by 10,000 storm troops.

Afterwards, Hitler will fly to Berlin for another whirlwind election campaign.—Reuter.

and although he has not yet been seen as a villain on the screen, he has often played nasty parts on the stage, and been very successful, particularly in a play called "A Murder has been Arranged." In "The Shadow," Henry Kendall is seen in one of his popular comedy characterizations, with a difference. You'll get the surprise of your lives from Henry Kendall when you see "The Shadow" at the King's Theatre on Wednesday.

"The Eagle and The Hawk"

Frederic March, after directing himself in about one-fourth of the scenes of "The Eagle and The Hawk," film in which he is featured, and which opens to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre is ready to qualify as director for anybody, as well as actor.

March was forced to do his own negotiating because of the nature of the picture in which he was playing. "The Eagle and The Hawk" is the story of two wartime aviators who become heroes under the stimulus of their own hatred for each other. March is cast as one of the pair, Cary Grant the other.

In the role of the aviator, March appears in a plane during a large part of the action of the picture. And, because Stuart Walker, director of the film, couldn't be alongside to give directions when the ship was in the air, and because even in the ground scenes, the roar of the motors and propellers would have drowned out his voice, March had to do his own directing.

As the result, he timed and directed all his scenes in the cockpit. By means of a push button inside the cockpit, he turned the camera, mounted on the nose of the plane, and focussed on him, on and off. The order to "cut" was given by means of a short wave radio set operating from the ground with a receiving set located inside the plane.

Hollywood's famed "suicide squadron" also appear in the picture in addition to Grant, Cary Grant and Jack Oakie. The story is by John Monk Saunders, author of "Wings."

LICENSING BOARD MEETING.

TWO NEW APPLICATIONS REFUSED

A meeting of the Licensing Board was held in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon, for the consideration of a number of applications for new licences and renewal of current licences.

The Attorney-General (Hon. Mr. C. G. Alabaster, K.C.) presided, other members present being the Hon. Mr. E. D. C. Wolfe (Inspector-General of Police), Major H. B. L. Dowling, and Messrs. J. L. Macpherson, J. M. Wong, and the secretary, Mr. H. Owen Davies.

Application Refused.
Appearing for Mr. A. Ogilvie, holder of a hotel-keeper's licence in connection with the Alhambra Hotel, Nos. 23-25 Nathan Road, Kowloon, Mr. O.E.C. Martin and that certain fire requirements had been complied with, and apart from the present licence, his client desired to apply for a publican's licence without bar for a restaurant he intended to open in the ground floor premises, now being occupied by a fancy goods shop which had not been doing well on account of the business depression. These ground floor premises were large and suited to the new purpose the applicant desired for it.

After consideration of the application, the applicant was informed that the Board was not prepared to grant a publican's licence, apart from the adjunct licence which would be granted subject to the fire conditions being complied with.

The Orpheum Buffet.
Mr. Selby Leonard Smyth, of the Orpheum Buffet, Kowloon, applied for a renewal of his publican's licence without bar, and was questioned by Major Dowling with regard to certain complaints from neighbouring tenants.

He replied that the only trouble he had been having was with a woman who lived on an upper floor, and entered on a lengthy statement in this connection.

With regard to the application, he said he had been doing a considerable amount of business, totalling some $5,000 per month, with American seamen who were the particular clientele catered for.

The Inspector-General of Police, in taking an unfavourable view of the application, said the place was degenerating into a drinking shop, and he could observe little evidence of business in the direction claimed.

The applicant was informed that the Board was not prepared to consider this application for renewal of a publican's licence, but they would grant an adjunct licence if that was desired.

The applicant was informed that under the conditions of the adjunct licence he could sell drinks only within stated hours.

Mr. Smyth: That spells ruination to me, because I deal with seamen who can only come ashore at certain hours of the day. I think it is just suicide and I cannot go on with it.

The Chairman: The Board cannot grant you an adjunct licence. As regards the original licence, as not prepared to grant you one.

The Hongkong Hotel.
Messrs. Thomas Jacob Mildren, Adolph Kiefer, and Alfonso Georges Plovanelli, representing the Repulse Bay, the Hongkong, and the Peninsula Hotels respectively, were granted a renewal of their publican's licence. They were advised in the event of departure and consequent transfer to notify the authorities promptly instead of delaying until after the actual departure as had been the case.

Nathan Blumenthal, of the Marcell Cafe, Kowloon, who had absented himself from the Colony

NEW OMNIBUSES.

DE LUXE MODELS FOR REPULSE BAY SERVICE

On Monday next, a new fleet of “Bedford” De Luxe 20-passenger buses will be put into operation on the inter-hotel service between the Hongkong and Repulse Bay Hotels.

A representative of the S. C. M. Post was afforded an opportunity of taking a trial run to Repulse Bay yesterday, when this new type gave an excellent performance. The power unit is sufficiently effective to permit a considerable portion of the route being taken on “top”—a decidedly pleasant experience for so large a vehicle. The running is pleasantly smooth, while the general equipment and seating accommodation are all that can be desired.

The coach-work is in a pleasing shade of silver-grey, with leather upholstery to match, while the whole of the metal fittings are chromium. Convenient racks are provided to carry light parcels, and all of the glasswork is “shatter-proof.”

One particularly pleasing feature is that the new buses are fitted with sunshade roofs, it being possible to make the conversion in a few seconds.

It is the intention of the Hotel Company to inaugurate the new service solely for residents and patrons of the hotels, separate buses being reserved especially for servants and staff.

Another innovation which is sure to prove popular is the decision to provide a number of private cars of what may also be termed the de luxe class. These vehicles will be available for residents who wish to engage the very latest types of British cars with a chauffeur in private livery. The service will be entirely distinct from the ordinary fleet of hire cars, and charges per hour, will, of course, be slightly increased. When one of these special cars is desired, it will merely be necessary to telephone for a “de luxe private car.”

during the year, was similarly warned. His publican's licence was renewed.

Other Cases.
The following were also granted licences:
Publican's Licence: Cheung Kiu-fong (Kowloon Hotel).
Publican's licence without bar: Robert Henry Waller (St. Francis Hotel), Chan Wah-chuen (Hotel Cecil), Ronald Alfred Edwards (King's Restaurant), Percy Ingham Newman (Gloucester Building), C.C. Francis (David's Cafeteria), Funk Tat-hang (China Emporium).
Hotel-keeper's Adjunct Licence: Miss Mary Dover (Peak Hotel), Mrs. Yoneko Kobayashi (Tokyo Hotel), Lui Gar-wai (Tungshang Hotel), Tsai Kam-hang (Hotel Asia), Ma Tau-nam and Fung Pak-lau (Empress Hotel), Yu Tung-wai (Meechow Hotel), Chau Cheuk-wan (The Great China Hotel), Mui Man (Hotel Nathan), F. A. Lowe (Hotel Trocadero), Jinkuro Morita (Chitose Kwan Hotel), Mrs. Riku Akiyoshi (Fukudumi Hotel), Jeckichi Seki (Chitose Hotel), Lee Pak-wai (New Asia Hotel), and Chan Chuck-yin (Luk Kok Hotel).

Restaurant Keeper's Adjunct Licence: Tainosaki Yamakawa (Yamakawa Hotel), Yu Man-cho (Queen's Cafeteria), Mrs. Kato Suya (Asahi Beer Hall), P. K. Loung (The Prince Cafe), Kuitiro Suhara (Tokyoan Hotel), and Pang Yat-sang (the South China Restaurant).

In the absence of Isaac Levy Goldenberg, (Palace Hotel), D. M. Goodall (Exchange Restaurant), and S. F. Shum (Canadian Confectionery and Bakery Co.) their respective applications for a hotel-keeper's licence without bar, and a restaurant keeper's adjunct licence, were not proceeded with, but were adjourned until the next meeting of the Board fixed for 12 noon, on the 26th instant.
